Hens and Music
Light in the Darkness
Getting Even With U. S. A.
Mr. Stathakis' Barrel

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THERE IS NO really important news for you, this Monday morning, except that Mrs. Thornton, who runs the Gunning River Poultry Farm, near Barnegat, N. J., not far from the Lakewood telegraph office where this is written, says she gets 15 per cent more eggs by turning on the radio in the hen house at 3 a. m.

Science says it is simple. The hen gets up earlier, because she likes the music, or more probably, intelligent creature, she buries her ears in the straw of her nest and lays an egg, from habit. With electric light turned on them until late at night, and music starting at 3 a. m., the hen can sympathize with the modern American business man.

It is always dangerous, however, to say that there is no important news. Louis the Sixteenth went shooting at Fontainbleu one day toward the end of the 18th century. He shot nothing and wrote in his diary the one word rien, meaning "nothing." And that day, as it happened, was the July 14, on which the Bastille prison was torn down, starting the revolution that cut off Louis' head.

He would not have written "rien" could he have looked ahead, poor man.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, eight years vice-chairman of the Democratic national committee, sees "light in the darkness, sailor." She thinks Mr. Hoover will not run again, in 1932, Coolidge or Morrow will be nominated, tariff and not prohibition will be the issue, and maybe a Democrat will be elected.

It is a big maybe. And tariff will not push prohibition out of first place. The tariff, for the average man is a matter of theory, vague, like the Monroe Doctrine.

Prohibition is a matter of fact, and opinions concerning it are definite.

Many workers believe that it has something to do with the present lack of jobs. They cannot exactly tell why, but "times seem to have been better when there was no prohibition."

And only a little while ago, with everything booming, savings banks bursting, wages going up, you were told that prohibition had done all that.

Others believe that excessive income tax, discouraging new enterprises, encouraging government extravagance with its annual billions of intake, puts a damper on national effort.

Something seems to be wrong for the moment, and nobody knows what or why.

When all went well, everybody could explain it.

"Getting even with the United States" is not simple.

Our tariff annoys Europe, and Europe would like to retaliate. But how?

Italy raised her tariff on automobiles to impossible heights. We make nearly all of Europe's low price cars, so that seemed a good idea.

But France complains and says to Italy, "we must have some carefully worked out general plan. Your new tariff hurts us."

Ford makes an arrangement with the great Isotta Fraschini Motor Company and will make his car inside the Italian tariff wall, in Milan.

Mr. Sloan, of General Motors, is understood to have made arrangements for manufacturing in Italy, long ago.

A French authority says Europe's nations must work together, for, "if one day it comes to commercial competition between the United States on the one hand, a number of competing states of Europe not united on the other, the prosperity of Europe will be ended."

George E. Stathakis, of Buffalo, cook by trade and philosopher by ambition and profession, made an oak barrel, got in and went over the Horse Shoe Falls at Niagara, to his death. One of his fellow countrymen, another Greek philosopher, more than 2000 years ago, jumped into the crater of Vesuvius, disappearing forever, or at least, until the judgment day.

He wanted to impress the multitude, and like the man that "fired the Ephesian dome" he has been more talked about than men more deserving.

Steve Brodie, of our land, known as the Brooklyn Bridge jumper, gained fame and large receipts for his saloon on the Bowery running no risk at all. His friends threw a well weighted dummy off the bridge. He was waiting in the water to be picked up.

Reporters that knew did not care to spoil a story and disappoint Brodie, so he spent the rest of his life, telling Bowery visitors from the country that

Nine More Than a Quorum on Hand as the Senate Gets President's Message

Washington, July 7 (INS)—President Hoover sent a vigorous message to the Senate today advocating prompt and unconditional ratification of the London naval treaty.

So far as he is concerned, he indicated, the Senate can take the treaty as brought home by the American delegates from London or no treaty at all. He did not use the famous Wilsonian phrase of ratification without the crossing of a "t" or the dotting of an "i." But it was evident from the tone of his message that he meant just that.

"The question before us now," the President said, "is not whether we shall have a treaty with either three more 8-inch cruisers or four less 6-inch cruisers, or whether we shall have a larger reduction in tonnage.

"It is whether we shall have this treaty or no treaty."

The President's message was read to an attentive chamber that contained 58 of the 96 members of the Senate—nine more than the requisite quorum.

It had remained doubtful up to the last minute whether the Senate would be able to function today, but diligent efforts on the part of both Republican and Democratic leaders drew the absentees back from seashore and other retreats in time for the initial rollcall.

CHARGE MISUNDERSTANDING

Mr. Hoover not only explained the terms of the treaty, but endeavored to answer some of the criticisms of the pact which have been

Ironsides Will Sail Tuesday

In her first move since before the war the historic frigate Constitution will leave the Navy Yard at Charlestown tomorrow for a trip across the harbor.

The famous craft will be moved to the drydock at South Boston, where three masts will be stepped, her final step in restoration. LASSMAN DIES IN MAINE LAKE

Lassman, it became known today, lost his life yesterday in Long Lake at Harrison, Me., while a guest at a boys' camp, where two years ago he served as counsellor.

Considerable mystery surrounded the death today, particularly because the big football man and boxer had gone out on the lake alone in a canoe, which is against camp rules, and because he was rated an excellent swimmer.

Only last March, while convalescing at Miami from his football injury, he rescued from drowning Miss Vera Erickson, 18, after another sturdy swimmer had failed in the attempt.

Some hours after Lassman set out in the canoe, and following a wind and rain storm, the canoe, empty, was found a mile and a half below the camp. Grappling was immediately begun and the body was recovered at 2 a. m. today.

'People for Treaty,' Declares Hoover

Washington, July 7 (AP)—President Hoover in his special message to the Senate calling for ratification of the London naval treaty, said:

"In requesting the Senate to convene for the special purpose of dealing with the treaty for the limitation and reduction of naval armament signed at London April 22, 1930, it is desirable that I should present my views upon it.

"This is especially necessary because of misinformation and misrepresentation which has been been widespread by those who in reality are opposed to all limitation and reduction in naval arms.

"We must naturally expect opposition from those groups who believe in unrestricted military strength as an objective of the American nation.

"Indeed, we find the same type of minds in Great Britain and Japan in parallel opposition to this treaty. Nevertheless, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the American people are opposed to the conception of these groups.

"Our people believe that military strength should be held in conformity with the sole purpose of national defense; they earnest-

FEAR GARRETT WAS 'TAKEN FOR A RIDE'

Sleuths Hunting for His Body in Blackstone River Section

On the theory that he may have been "taken for a ride" private detectives in the employ of District Attorney William J. Foley today sought the Blackstone river valley section of Rhode Island for the body of Oliver B. Garrett.

Sleuths worked out of Providence in the search, which may include the dragging of the river for the former liquor raider, who, two weeks ago today defaulted trial on extortion charges in Superior court.

The theory that Garrett is dead victim of those who feared he would make good a boast attributed to him to "tell the story" at the trial, has gained considerable strength in certain circles following an intensive search that has failed to unearth a single clue to his whereabouts.

In this connection, the detectives as well as the Providence police, are seeking a former Rhode Island state prison convict known to have been in Boston just before the former raiding squad leader dropped from sight on the eve of his trial. This man, while in Boston, associated with persons who had been friendly with Garrett, and has not been seen here since Garrett disappeared.

Whether definite information indicating that Garrett was slain is in the possession of the detectives was not revealed, but it was indicated by the assignment of several men in the hunt for his body.

The move came at the same time that Dist. Atty. William J. Foley instituted three suits against bondsmen for Garrett.

Serving of writs by Deputy Sheriffs Thomas F. Donovan, Daniel A. Whelton, John J. Casey and Thomas J. Wilson on the day Garrett defaulted two weeks ago today, made this possible, 14 days' notice being required.

Leopold Manfredonia and Oscar Long were named in two suits of $2000 each and Manfredonia was named with Frank Anastasia, Garrett's barber, in one for $2500.

The same detective agency still has under observation the Franklin camp at which Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Lillian V. Hatch, co-defendants with the former raider, are staying.

There is a possibility that other circulars, bearing Garrett's picture and more detailed information of the charges against him than was contained in the first 7000 police posters sent out, will be prepared for distribution this week. If so, they will be sent to every town and hamlet in New England.

Fair and Cool for Hub 2 More Days

A continuance of the moderately cool spell for another 24 hours was predicted today by the weather bureau, and sunny skies were promised throughout today and tomorrow, with light westerly and northwesterly winds.

HUSTON STICKS AS G. O. P. HEAD

Washington, July 7 (AP)—Claudius Huston has no intention of resigning as party chairman at the conference of Republican leaders here on Thursday.

He conferred with President Hoover for an hour and a half last night.

Asked about their meeting today, Mr. Huston declined to comment. He said he was not going to give any credence to the many stories published recently about his intention of resigning by either affirming or denying them.

There was a very definite indication, however, that he was going ahead as national chairman at least for the time being. It was pointed out that if he intended to resign this action would not be in order at Thursday's meeting of national committee officers.

SON REVEALS PLEDGE TO TALK WITH FAMILY

Creator of "Sherlock Holmes" Also Hoped to Talk With Houdini "Over There"

London, July 7—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle died at his home here today of a heart attack. He was 71 years old.

To Lady Doyle, his two sons, Dennis and Adrica, and his daughter, Jean, he promised to communicate by spirit signs. They were with him when he died, and believe, no less surely than did he, that spirit communication will be established.

AS TOLD BY SON

Asked whether the creator of one of the most famous characters in modern fiction had spoken of communicating with his family after death, Adrica Doyle replied:

"Why, of course. My father fully believed that when he passed over he would continue to keep in touch with us. All his family believe so, too."

"There is no question that my father will often speak to us just as he did before he passed over. We will always know when he is speaking, but one has to be careful because there are practical jokers on the other side, as there are here.

"It is quite possible that these jokers may attempt to impersonate him, but there are tests which my mother knows, such as little mannerisms of speech which cannot be impersonated and which will tell us it is my father, himself, who is speaking."

Sir Arthur had been under a physician's care the last six months. His weakened condition was thought to have been brought on by a series of lectures on spiritualism last October in Scandinavia.

Until two days ago it had been thought he was improving. Then he contracted a cold.

In his time, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle played many parts, and most of them famously. To scores of country folk along the sands of the English channel at Southsea he was family physician. That was in the eighties.

CREATED "SHERLOCK."

To millions of readers all over the world, he became the doyen of detective story writers. That was in the nineties. The chief character of his imagination, Sherlock Holmes, got to be the common coin of conversation.

After the dawn of this century, Sir Arthur seemed an official apologist for Britain in the Boer War. It was for his labors in placing before Europe the facts of that conflict, as Britain's governing classes conceived them to be, that he was knighted.

Two decades later, after a greater and ghastlier war, in which one voiced by admirals of the navy and senatorial opponents for the past three months.

"THIS NAVAL TREATY OR NONE," IS HOOVER'S EDICT TO SENATE

QUORUM SET FOR BATTLE OVER PACT

The treaty, he said, has been "misrepresented" by its foes—by those, he said, "who in reality are opposed to all limitation and reduction in naval arms."

"We must naturally," he said, "expect opposition from those groups who believe in unrestricted military strength as an objective of the American nation. Indeed we find the same type of minds in Great Britain and Japan."

But, he warned, the alternative of this treaty is "competitive building of navies, with all its flow of suspicion, hate, ill will and ultimate disaster.

FEARS ILL-WILL

"It is folly," he went on, "to think that because we are the richest nation in the world we can outbuild all other countries. Other nations will make any sacrifice to maintain their instruments of defense against us and we shall eventually reap in their hostility and ill-will the full measure of the additional burden which we may thus impose upon them."

Treaty Like Counterfeit Money, Says Copeland

Towanda, Pa., July 7 (AP)—Dr. Royal S. Copeland, U. S. Senator from New York, intends to do all in his power to have the Senate defer action on the London naval pact until late in the fall.

Asked his opinion on the treaty, the Senator replied:

"What do you think of counterfeit money?"

"The treaty is not what it is supposed to be. The average citizen believes it will cut down the navies of the world and do away with naval building programs. On the contrary, the treaty will cost us $1,000,000,000. If the public in general understood its real meaning, I do not believe it would pass. Therefore, I am going to do all in my power to defer action until late in the fall in order that the people may have a chance to find out what it really does."

Smoot, Baird Halt Their Honeymoons for Treaty

Washington, July 7 (AP)—Whatever else the London naval treaty may accomplish in the future, it already has disrupted plans of two honeymooning Senators.

The veteran Senator Smoot of Utah, wed only a few days ago and planning to leave this week for Honolulu, has responded to a plea from President Hoover by advising that he would arrive in the capital Wednesday to support ratification.

He and Mrs. Smoot will be guests of President and Mrs. Hoover at the White House during the debate.

From abroad, Senator Baird of New Jersey, who also is on his wedding trip, cabled the President voluntarily that he would return immediately to help insure a quorum for approval of the treaty.

ly desire real progress in limitation and reduction of naval arms of the world, and their aspiration is for abolition of competition in the building of arms as a step toward world peace. Such a result can be obtained in no other way than by international agreement.

SAFEGUARDS IDEALS

"The present treaty is one which holds these safeguards and advances these ideals. Its ratification is in the interest of the United States.

"The only alternative to this treaty is the competitive building of navies with all its flow of suspicion, hate, ill-will and ultimate disaster.

"It is folly to think that because we are the richest nation in the world we can outbuild all other countries. Other nations will make any sacrifice to maintain their instruments of defense against us, and we shall eventualy reap in their hostility and ill-will the full measure of the additional burden which we may thus impose upon them. The very entry of the United States into such courses as this would invite the consolidation of the rest of the world against us and bring our peace and independence into jeopardy.

"Defense is the primary function of government, and therefore our first concern in examination of any act of this character is the test of its adequacy in defense. No critic has yet asserted that with the navies provided in this agreement together with our army, our aerial defense and our national resources, we cannot defend ourselves, and certainty we want no military establishment for the purpose of domination of other nations.

"Our naval defense position under this treaty is the more clear if we examine our present naval strength in comparison to the present strength of the other nations, and then examine the improvements in this proportion which will result from this treaty. This improvement arises from the anticipation of parity in battleships to be reached 10 years hence under the Washington arms treaty, and the fact that other nations have been building in the classes of ships not limited by that treaty, while we, until lately, lagged behind.

GIVES STATISTICS

Then Mr. Hoover goes on to show by statistics of total tonnage and of ships by various classes how the position of the United States will be improved under the London treaty as compared with its present position in relation to navies of the other nations. Continuing, he says:

"The major discussion has been directed almost wholly to the fact that the United States is to have 18 cruisers with 8-inch guns, with an aggregate tonnage of 180,000 tons, as against Great Britain's 15 such ships, with a tonnage of 146,800 tons and Japan's 12 such ships of a tonnage of 108,400 tons; the United States supplementing this tonnage with cruisers armed with 6-inch guns up to a total of 323,500 tons; Great Britain up to 339,000 tons and Japan to 208,800 tons. The larger gross tonnage to Great Britain as stated being compensation for the larger gun caliber of the American cruiser fleet, but the United States has the option to duplicate the British fleet, if it is so desires.

"The criticism of the arrangement arises from the fact that the general board of the United States Navy recommended that to reach parity with Great Britain the United States should have three more of the 10,000 ton cruisers (21 instead of 18), with 8-inch guns, and a total of 315,000 tons or 8,000 tons less total cruiser tonage than this treaty provides.

"Therefore, criticism revolves around less than 3 per cent of our whole fleet, and even within this 3 per cent comes the lesser question of whether 30,000 tons of ships armed with 8-inch guns are better than 38,000 tons armed with 6-inch guns. The opinion of our high naval authorities is divided on the relative merits of these alternatives.

'THIS PACT OR NONE'

"The question before us now is not whether we shall have a treaty with either three more 8-inch cruisers or 4 less 6-inch cruisers, or whether we shall have a larger reduction in tonnage. It is whether we shall have this treaty or no treaty. It is a question as to whether we shall move strongly toward limitation and reduction in naval arms or whether we shall have no limitation or reduction and shall enter upon a disastrous period of competitive armament.

"This treaty does mark an important step in disarmament and in world peace. It is important for many reasons that it should be dealt with at once.

"If we fail now the world will be again plunged backward from its progress toward peace."

Heart Victim

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, creator of "Sherlock Holmes" and noted spiritualist, who died today in London, aged 71.

of his own sons was among the sacrificed, Sir Arthur rose to fresh prominence as one of the recognized authorities on spiritualism.

He announced he and Lady Doyle were fully convinced that they had communicated with their dead son and that the son had replied.

Doyle was born at Edinburgh, May 22, 1859, son of Charles Doyle, grandson of John Doyle, best known as "H. B.," and nephew of Punch's celebrated Richard Doyle. All three were well-known as artists and caricaturists.

He studied at Stonyhurst College and Edinburgh University and went to Germany. Receiving his degree in medicine he returned home and set up practice at Southsea.

INTRODUCES SHERLOCK

In his eight years there—1882 to 1890—he wrote fiction. Success came so abundantly he gave up being a physician and became a full-fledged figure in the realm of literature. He introduced "Sherlock Holmes" in 1887 in his book, "A Study in Scarlet."

In 1900 and in 1906, Sir Arthur contested for a seat in Parliament, but without success. His recreations included golf and cycling and he was regarded as one of the best amateur billiard players in England. He was married twice, first to Louise Hawkins of Minsterworth, in 1885. She died in 1906, and the next year, Sir Arthur married Jean Leckie, daughter of James Blyth Leckie of Glebe House, Blackheath.

Old Friends Quit Doyle, Due to Psychic Leaning

London, July 7 (AP)—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle during the later part of his life presented an heroic and at the same time somewhat tragic figure For the past few years he had devoted virtually all his time to the propagation of spiritualism, and was recognized as one of the great leaders of the world in this belief.

Because of his association with this crusade which he himself characterized as an unpopular one, he gradually lost some of his old-time literary friends who saw no virtue in spiritualism and who were inclined to look upon him as an eccentric.

It is not many years ago that this broad-shouldered viking with his handsome head and schock of iron-gray hair was the idol of London drawing rooms. As creater of Sherlock Holmes and other great works he wasn an outstanding figure in the realm of literature, and the world paid him homage.

After he embarked on his spiritualistic campaign, however, things changed and he was not so much sought after.

REPORTER WHO WAS 'WARNED' IN HOSPITAL

New Lingle Case Revealed by Chicago News Man Who "Covered" Crime

Chicago, July 7 (AP)—Leland H. Reese, crime reporter for the Chicago Daily News, today asserted in a signed story dispatched from Dekalb, Ill., to his paper that an automobile in which he was driving Friday night with a bodyguard was sideswiped and crowded from the road deliberately by another car, which followed for ten miles. He said he had been warned of violence.

Reese and two companions, Ed Braun and Allen Finlay, were in Glidden Memorial Hospital at Dekalb with bruises and cuts, and Braun and Finlay suffering broken ribs as well.

HAD SEVERAL WARNINGS

His dispatch referred to an article published July 2 in the St. Louis Star, which said a reporter for the Chicago Daily News was soon "to get his."

"I was told by numerous persons that I was the reporter, and because of previous warnings given me I thought it probable that I was meant," Reese wrote.

"But further, on Thursday, July 3, I received a really definite message that I was to be attacked and beaten, if not killed. This tip did not come by anonymous letter, as do most of the threats received in newspaper offices. Nor did it emanate, as do most of these threats, from the usual gangland sources. It suggested an attack from quite another source."

He had also been warned, he said, after the killing of Julius Rosenheim, an underworld tipster said to have been used by Reese, and again after the killing of Alfred Lingle, Tribune reporter.

"This," he explained, "is why I have been accompanied night and day by Allen Finlay, who was engaged for that purpose by the Daily News. Finlay bore a commission as special policeman and was thus licensed to carry a revolver."

The author of the St. Louis Star article to which Reese referred, Harry Brundige, will be summoned to Chicago to be questioned

Among women fliers, American girls shine as individuals, but have not taken to flying on a big scale. Only 205 American women have licenses to fly, only 34 have flown at one time more than ten hours. British women take flying more seriously and enthusiastically, perhaps because British girls have fewer other forms of excitement.

Britain's air heroine, until last week, was Amy Johnson, 23, who flew alone, in a small Moth Gipsy plane, from London to Australia. This week all Britain is cheering Winifred Browne. She beat all the men, including the Schneider stars, Britain's greatest aces, in a 750-mile flight around Britain, and won the king's cup. No woman had ever done that.

Miss Brown, who is 26 years old, beat 87 other fliers.

France owns two tiny islands, homes of hardy fishermen, St. Pierre and Miquelon, off the Newfoundland coast, and those islands worry our so-called dry nation.

Canada cut down on whiskey shipments recently by request, and immediately the little French islands began receivng and shipping to us 25,000 cases of whiskey per week.

France promises to see what she can do about it. Perhaps the best reply to our tariff, if they really want revenge, would be to flood us with whiskey and brandy.

France might well reply to our official protest "if you cannot keep your people from whiskey drinking, how do you expect me to do it?"

Uncle Sam, with his drink, is like Frost's farmer that yoked himself up with a bull calf and went galloping down hill shouting, "Stop us somebody, darn our fool souls." It is hard to change men's habits by law.

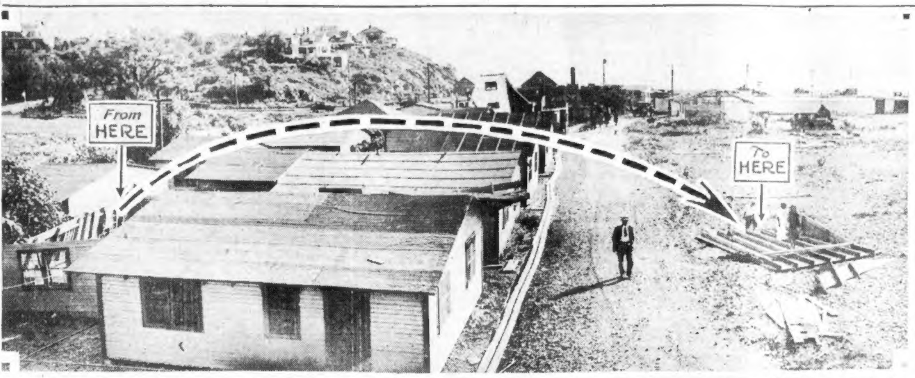
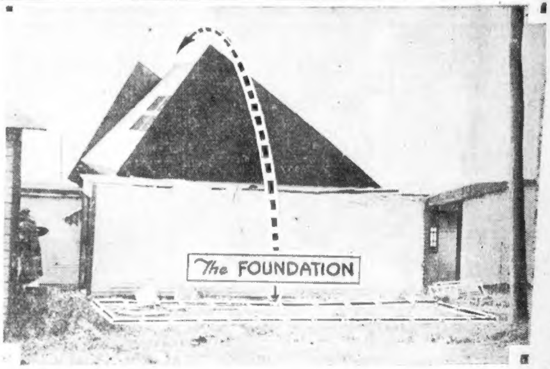
WHERE THE BIG WIND TOSSED HOUSES ABOUT LIKE PLAYTHINGS



THE ROOF OF this house went sailing over the next house, and across the street, landing in a heap on vacant lot far from home. (Staff photos.)



ANOTHER FREAK OF the wind is illustrated by this house that was picked up and hurled right over the next house. One corner caught on the other house and there it tilts.

Score Lose Homes in Storm, Several Hurt

Massachusetts today began to repair property damage amounting to thousands of dollars caused by one of the worst electrical and wind storms in years.

Several persons were injured in the storm and more than a score lost their summer homes entirely as the wind swept up the North Shore. Governor Allen's summer place at Marblehead Neck was badly damaged.

Corp. Alexander Jurkowski of Springfield, of headquarters company, 104th Infantry, was paralyzed in the left side at Camp Devens when lightning struck telephone wires he was stringing.

CAMP BLOWN AWAY.

An overnight camp house at Devereaux beach, Marblehead, was swept through the air and dumped on the roof of another one within a few minutes after Mrs. B. R. Maize and her two children, Betty, 10, and Bobby, six, had left it.

Mrs. F. F. Joyner of Boston was pinned beneath a wardrobe cabinet in the crash and was stunned and bruised.

Coastal cities and towns bore the brunt of the attack of the storm. Marblehead was cut off from all communication during the night and valuable yachts in the harbor narrowly escaped destruction.

SEVERAL HOUSES STRUCK

Trees were uprooted, signboards blown over and streets and homes flooded in several cities and towns. Lightning struck in a number of places.

Numerous slight fires were caused by lightning bolts in Melrose, Malden, Everett, Revere, Watertown, Newton, Dorchester, Roxbury and West Roxbury. Mrs. Mary E. McCarthy of Maplewood st., Watertown, and her sons, Robert and Wallace, were in the living room when a bolt struck the roof and passed through the house. The boys were knocked from their chairs, but recovered and fought the flames with a garden hose.

A bolt struck the chimney of the house occupied by Herbert I. Ordway on Gibbs st., Newton Center, causing a fire that badly damaged the top of the house. The homes of Marcus Walsh, Grove st., Auburndale, and John Picarielo, Eastern ave., Swampscott, were struck, a bolt crashing through an upstairs bedroom in the latter place and continuing through the kitchen downstairs.

Before His Death Trip Over Niagara

Rides Niagara in Cask But Suffocates

Niagara Falls, July 7—George Stathakis, Buffalo chef, who attempted to negotiate Niagara Falls in a barrel, was taken out of the huge floating cask, yesterday, dead.

The 105-year-old turtle, which Stathakis believed was sacred and whose charm would protect him in his plunge, was taken from the barrel, alive and active.

Death, according to Coroner W. W. Thompson of Niagara Falls, Ont., was due to suffocation.

The barrel was sighted shortly after 6 p. m. by Canadian officals on duty at the Canadian end of Falls View bridge, the first structure below the falls.

William (Red) Hill, veteran riverman, was notified by telephone and, with his son William, Jr., went down into the gorge. The barrel was afloat, bumping against the rocks on the Canadian side of the river, but was intact.

By dint of much pulling and hauling with the rowboat and aided by favorable currents, the barrel was taken to the Canadian shore, a short distance below the abutment of the Falls View bridge. The mammoth cask weighed more than a ton.

It was some time before the barrel could be opened. The manhole through which Stathakis entered was on the submerged end.

Stathakis was found still strapped to a mattress which he had designed as a buffer against the side of the barrel. Coroner Thompson expressed the belief that he had died 10 or 12 hours previously.

Hill said Stathakis told him that if he lost his life in his attempt and the turtle lived, it would tell of the experience. Hill has the turtle in a tub of water at his home.

Stathakis carried a pad of paper on which he said he would note some of his sensations during the trip. There was not a mark on the paper.

RED RAIDERS IN CHINA RETREAT

Shanghai, July 7 (AP)—Hankow advices today indicated bands of so-called Communist raiders that recently sacked Yochow and other Yangtse valley towns, killing hundreds, had withdrawn into Central Hunan Province. The situation at Shasi, about 100 miles north of Yochow, was reported uncertain because of the presence of the large bodies of bandits.

The American gunboat Guam, on which a seaman, Samuel Elkins of Brooklyn, was killed Saturday in an exchange of fire with bandits near Yochow, presumably was returning to Hankow with the body to send it to Shanghai and thence to the United States.

BEGIN WORK ON BOULDER DAM

Washington, July 7 (AP)—Announcing the commencement today of construction of the $165,000,000 Boulder Canyon dam project, Secretary Wilbur characterized the work as signalizing "our national conquest over the great American desert."

He said Walker R. Young, the engineer in charge, was waiting on the ground for telegraphic instructions when President Hoover signed the deficiency bill, containing an item of $10,660,000 for this work.

"With dollars, men and engineering brains," Secretary Wilbur said, "we will build a great natural resource. We will make new geography, and start a new era in the southwestern part of the United States."

Dr. Elwood Mead, commissioner of reclamation, received a telegram from Young today, saying the first construction was under way.

Secretary Wilbur said the first days' work would be the staking out of a railroad and a construction road, and the laying out of streets for a permanent townsite.

Boy Kills Friend in Attempt to "Shoot Radio Announcer

Chicago, July 7 (AP)—John Ubowski, 17, listening to the radio, decided the announcer ought to be shot.

2 TUNE UP FOR ENDURANCE HOP

New York, July 7 (INS)—Two planes were undergoing a final tuning up at Roosevelt Field today for an attempt to smash the endurance record made by the Hunter brothers at Chicago. The flights will start tomorrow or Wednesday.

Unable to obtain permission of department of commerce officials to change pilots in mid-air every 24 hours, the group of Detroit aviators announced they would select pilots to remain in the two planes throughout the attempts.

"Tex" Anding and Jack Carleson will probably be in one plane and T. P. Oleson and Storm Archer in the other. Captain Philip Watson will be in charge of a third plane used to refuel the endurancers.

Mr. Chadbourne and several guests were uninjured and went ashore in a small boat. The crew of 28 men remained aboard. An attempt to float her will be made at high tide tonight.

RAPS CHURCHES FOR RACE WAR

Bournemouth, Eng., July 7 (AP)—Race prejudice in America held the attention of the International Congregational Council this morning. The topic for discussion was "Church and World Paganism," with Dr. George L. Cady of New York as principal speaker.

There is no room for race prejudice and Jesus Christ in the same church, he held, yet Christians were at present attempting to make room for both. In America, he said, the Negro was shut out from a large number of Christian churches of the North and from many more of those in the South.

The churches, Dr. Cady concluded, would be unable to fight world paganism effectively so long as the church repudiated the Christianity which it professed by not practicing Christian brotherhood between the races.

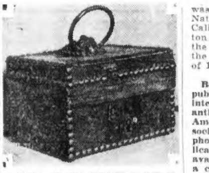
DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 138



YES, IT IS VERY LIKELY that this treasure chest has been filled with gold, perhaps many a time, for it was carried through the great Gold Strike of '49. It was used in that gold search by Nathaniel Wilton, in his trip to California, as his "Bank." Wilton also took this chest around the world with him. It is now the property of Dean T. Wilton of 14 Marathon st., Arlington.

Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of antiques of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, providing the owner lives in Greater Boston. Dance to Aid Palestine Planned

Boston Young Hadassah to Hold Benefit at Nantasket on Wednesday

By NANCY BREWSTER

The Boston Junior Hadassah, which every summer conducts a dance in the financial interests of Palestine, will this year hold its party at the Shore Gardens, Nantasket, on Wednesday.

Seven hundred young Jewish women devote their energies and efforts to the progress of the Zionist movement, their specific responsibilities placed with the Meier Shfeyah Orphanage and the Nurses' Training School in Jerusalem, which supplies nurses for the Hadassah hospitals throughout the Holy Land.

Part of a national organization, the Boston unit was formed in 1921 and has grown steadily in membership and financial charge until today its annual quota to Palestinian rehabilitation is $7500.

Clubwomen Invited To Express Views on Reading of Poetry

Do women read poetry?

You may not think this a controversial question, but it is. Mrs. S. J. Ramage, former president of the Woman's Club of Decatur, Orange, recently raised the question and throughout the country, clubwomen have taken up its discussion in an attempt to prove or confirm the allegation.

A literary critic recently held that among the 2000 people he knew, few men liked poetry and NO women. Hence the acceptance of the challenge by clubwomen.

Mrs. Ramage maintains that while women have not made up the list of leading poets, that in its appreciation they have the merit of leading—"because she does not approach it from the fact side, but from the heart side. The question is will the distractions in this bewildered generation of ours admit it."

Maybe my clubwomen readers would like to express an opinion on the topic. I'll be glad to print the mental findings.

Legion Auxiliary Busy With Plans for Convention Dinner

The state's dinner committee of the national convention of the American Legion Auxiliary is busily at work these days preparing for the most colorful event of all the convention sessions which are to be held in the city Oct. 6 to 9.

Miss Adelaide Fitzgerald of Hopkinton, chairman of the committee, has enlisted the aid of an enlarged group of auxiliary members that the 1200 members to be accommodated at this banquet will be served adequately and hospitably.

Each state department will have its own table and number, determined by the numerical membership of the state. The honored places near the head table are also similarly premiumed, their quota determined by percentage membership established by the national body. In which event even the small state has an opportunity of securing the honor place.

ATTRACTICE TABLES

In the past Pennsylvania has had a replica of the Liberty Bell on its table; Oklahoma, oil derricks, while Mississippi's table was heaped with cotton balls. Repetition of such color and effect is expected at this state dinner, to be held in Symphony Hall, which this year will enable the head table to be formed as a horse shoe.

Working in the interests of the National American Auxiliary states' dinner, and assisting Miss Adelaide Fitzgerald, general chairman, in the arrangements, is this honor roll of women: Mrs. Catharine Littlefield, vice-chairman; Hazel Dexheimer, secretary; Margaret Carey, vice-chairman; Mrs. Pearl Alden, Walpole; Mrs. Jean Beaudet, Arlington; Mildred Blomgren, Everett; Mrs. Agnes Bourisk, Sanford, Me.; Mrs. Nellie Bowler, Worcester; Mrs. Margaret Brownson, Brighton; Mrs. Gladys Bryant, Watertown; Genevieve E. Bucher, Waltham; Kathryn Collins, Sharon; Maude Collins, Hingham; Pauline A. Collins, Sharon; Helen Condon, Bristol, R. I.; Anna Connors, Canton; Mrs. Ann Cassidy, Winthrop.

Others are Edith Cunningham, Milton; Mrs. Fanny Daukshta, Brighton; Mrs. Ethel Dunbar, Everett; Helen L. Easson, Melrose Highlands; Mrs. Hazel M. Ellis, Arlington; Mrs. Martha W. Enos, Cohasset; Margaret F. Fee, Hingham; Mrs. Frances Fitzpatrick, Hopkinton; Lucy M. Forster, Waltham; Mrs. Katharine Garrity, Lowell; Mrs. Lucy Haeslich, Milton; Catherine M. OF COURSE we are willing to admit that dots are good this season, especially when word from Paris confirms the fact.

UPON SEEING the rash of polka dots that has broken out all over the mode, we have wondered whether the dot could be used in any new dashing manner. Imagine our surprise to find it most excitingly new in its use on the fabric of a smart dinner gown. The dots are larger than those of the daytime prints. The effect is extremely smart and, conversely, smartly extreme, also airily, ethereally lovely!

THE GOWN pictured is definitely for the sophisticate—of white chiffon, with "saucer" dots in black, widely spaced. The skirt is widely circular from a deep hip yoke; circular capes form the sleeves, the neck is a shallow V, and the chiffon finely shirred on the shoulders. The front section of the belt is of black velvet, tying in double bows and ends. The wide brimmed rough straw hat is white, with ribbon band, and pleated ribbon run through slits at back of crown. White gloves are worn, a black cut bead bracelet, and a necklace of black and white pearls.

WHETHER your sleeves are long, short, or non-existent it is well to wear a bracelet or two.

HEAVY by day and light by night is the jewelry mode of the moment. Beads are big for tweeds and shantungs; delightfully dainty for lace, flat crepe and chiffon. And in the fragile class are pieces so delicate and icily transparent that they are a pleasure to wear no matter how high the temperature has risen.

AS EVENING comes on, hat textures assume more elaborate proportions. This summer the lace straws are exceedingly good for daylight and evening dining in or out of town. Two typical models seen recently are—a LeMonnier design with shallow crown of black hair lace and halo-like brim of fine black baku. In many of the formal hats you will notice the tendency to show the forehead. In another Agnes has taken a black exotic lace straw, draped it to one side and added a bandeau of satin ribbon.

Ex-Waltham Girl Rules Summer Society Colony

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Society Editor

New York, July 7—Among the important personages who are passengers on the incoming Olympic, scheduled to arrive tomorrow, is the Princess Aymon de Faucigny Lucinge.

Annually the American born lady with the high-sounding and almost unpronounceable name, crosses the Atlantic and journeys to northern New England to preside as the social queen of the White Mountains' summer colony.

The position which she enjoys is hers by inheritance. For she received upon the death of her first husband, Joseph Stickney, many thousands of acres, not to mention a group of prosperous hotels, in the heart of the mountains of New Hampshire.

EX-WALTHAM GIRL

Since starting life as Carolyn Foster, daughter of a general storekeeper in Waltham, Mass., the princess has achieved dizzy social heights. She first attracted the attention of "Joe" Stickney, a multi-millionaire, who was visiting a friend in the White Mountains. It was a case of "love at first sight," and the marriage of the village belle to the owner of vast New Hampshire tracts, coal mines and large blocks of Pennsylvania railroad stock, created no end of talk.

Shortly after their marriage, Mr. Stickney installed his bride in a mansion on upper Fifth ave., and surrounded her with every luxury great wealth will provide.

Being naturally clever, the young matron waited patiently for society to knock at her door, instead of making the mistake so many others have made of attempting to take Mayfair by assault.

Reports of Mrs. Stickney's delightful entertainments soon reached the ears of the social worldlings and soon they stampeded her drawing room, with the result that in a few years she was "made" socially.

MARRIED PRINCE

The widow Stickney shortly afterward sailed for London, where she found every worthwhile door open to receive her.

Numerous "titles" showered her with attentions, but she turned a deaf ear to all but the Prince de Faucigny Lucinge, a great-grandson of King Charles X of France, who was, strange as it may seem, wealthy in his own right.

Their married life was short but happy. The prince, notwithstanding his advanced years, enlisted in the French army and contracted an illness that cost him his life in the memorable days of Verdun.

FLYING BOATS PLY BETWEEN HUB-N. Y.

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

While the White River Junction air line has temporarily suspended operations, word is received to the effect that the long-promised "all-the-way-by-water" service between Boston and New York will shortly become a reality.

Olympian Airways, Inc., prospective operators of the new line, through its president, Robert W. Dewey, announces that terminal facilities off the southern edge of the Boston Airport are rapidly nearing completion. As soon as the float is in shape the twin-hulled Savoia-Marchetti flying boats will begin to ply their way twice daily between Boston and Gotham.

A visit was paid the local airport by John D. Sullivan, of the Olympian company, and an inspection made of the landing facilities in the harbor. The trip from New York was made in the famous ocean-crossing Bellanca monoplane Pathfinder, which Roger Williams and Lewis Yancey flew from Old Orchard to Rome.

While in Boston Sullivan and his pilot, L. K. Rykers, stated that the Pathfinder is now owned by Olympian Airways, and that an attempt to lower the existing Hunter brothers' endurance record would be made with the plane. A Packard Diesel engine will be installed for the long hop attempt.

It was not stated whether Boston would be included in the endurance flight or not, but the chances are good that the plane will stick around its take-off point in New York.

A complete schedule of departures and arrivals of Olypian Airways with the date of commencement of flying operations, will be made in a few days by officials of the air line.

SEE BIG SAVING FROM SCIENCE

By GOBIND BEHARI LAR
Universal Service Science Editor

New York, July 7—How scientific research can save the expenses of everybody and make money for everybody will be shown in the near future by the establishment of the National Hydraulic Research Laboratory in the bureau of standards at Washington. President Hoover has supported the project and Congress has authorized it.

Dr. George K. Burgess, director of the Bureau of Standards, explains:

"This country is spending hundreds of millions annually in engineering works of a hydraulic nature. Our engineers have applied the available knowledge of hydraulic phenomena, but they have lacked exact data and a detailed understanding of the process of water flow which would have enabled them to improve greatly upon the fundamental features of their designs.

"Experiments connected with the design of a large ship lock, carried out by the hydraulic laboratory in Berlin led to a saving of $500,000. A model experiment in connection with two ocean-going vessels resulted in an improvement which saved the owners $25,000 of coal each year."

Pays Tribute to Memory of Pure Food Specialist

Editor Boston American:

The death of Dr. H. W. Wiley, noted food specialist, recalls an event in his life, when your paper summoned him to Boston to investigate foods and drugs. I was with him at that time and noted his skill in several special cases which yielded to his advice after a stormy time.

We honor his memory for his ability, his perseverance and persistent ways in which he pushed reform measures.

He hated anything adulterated. He spared no pains to make careful investigations. He stood his ground after arriving at conclusions which he studied carefully before announcing results.

You could not browbeat him. It was good to have a talk with him. His knowledge of his specialty was always edifying. He knew his subject well. I could not forego this opportunity of bearing witness to his gifts.

Says Colleges Fail in One Respect

Editor Boston American:

I agree with that speaker quoted in your paper who maintained upon one of the occasions of addressing the graduating class of a well known educational institution that college education does not encourage a woman to be a home builder.

What they have filled their minds with from the college mill gives them the vision of wider opportunities than are limited by the four walls of home life.

Domestic science taught in colleges makes them think more of counting calories and estimating food values before a table, while back of them the biscuits are burning in the oven. They are ever attempting to find out a well-balanced meal. But many of these graduates have not learned how to broil a steak or bake a loaf of bread. The ability to prepare and serve a well cooked meal is often lacking. Home cannot be home until good cooking prevails, which means ability to cook simple food well. A divorce came before the court recently because the college-bred wife refused to get up and prepare breakfast. She said that she hated to cook and would rather read a novel.

Sounds Warning Against Petting Strange Dogs

Beware of strange dogs during the summer. A friend of mine petted a strange bull dog over in Somerville to see if it were affectionate.

It wasn't.

Harvard Not the Wealthiest Law School

Editor Boston American:

Harvard Law school is not the wealthiest law school in the world, according to a remark made at the late Harvard commencement.

The Michigan Law school, Detroit, has recently received $21,000,000 from a graduate of 1882 and his family. This law school has this distinction.

Says Blondes Should Have Tercentenary Edge

Editor Boston American:

So brunettes are going to rule the roost in Boston Tercentenary in August. This is a great reflection upon the blondes. They figured largely in the early history of this country. If you will take the pains to read, all the young women with few exceptions were blondes. In fact, Pilgrims down in Plymouth thought blondes looked more like angels than brunettes and gave them privileges upon festive occasions.

Gov. Winthrop for his third wife married a blonde named Margaret. His other wives were all blondes. If the brunettes are going to be prominent in this coming parade and blondes must take a back seat, let me warn the committee that they are not running true to history of the past in this preference.

Commends Loan Fund for Students at Tech

Editor Boston American:

The creation of a loan fund amounting to $4,200,000, to help students to pay the cost of modern education in the Mass. Institute of Technology is commendable.

The plan is a loan to any student who passes certain required tests of ability, character and personality for the amount of the tuition either in part or in whole.

This plan will go into operation this fall. I only hope that wealthy students who have ability, character and personality will not have their eye upon this loan just to help out their Dad's budget of money for the year. I am not throwing any reflection at these scions of wealth, but I know where funds of this kind have gone to those who were not needy but fulfilled the requirements of the special loan.

One Viewpoint That Changed With Time

Editor Boston American:

During this tercentenary year it is good to dig up some of these old past events. I noticed a few of them in your paper last week.

Here is another: Daniel Webster over 100 years ago opposed the appropriation of $50,000 to establish mail service between Boston and the Pacific coast. He is quoted as saying:

"What is the use of connecting Boston with that wild country. I will never vote one cent from the public treasury to place the Pacific coast one inch nearer to Boston than it is today. There is the region of savages and wild beasts."

How times have changed. I understand there is a train full of these modern savages from different sections of the Pacific coast en route to New England and Boston.

HENRY T. NICHOLSON.

Western Visitor Well Repaid for Trip to Hub

Editor Boston American:

Boston has a different look from any other city. There is so much history centered in it that it takes time and physical effort to discover it. It is worth discovering. Since coming from the far West here, where I have spent the greater part of my life, I have always had a desire to take in many events found in the history of Boston and surrounding places.

For two weeks with guide book in hand, I have been satisfying my quest. Why if we had on the Pacific Coast so many historical sites associated with the starting of the great Republic, we would never cease blowing about it. I wish that you could keep the lower part of Boston free from skyscrapers. Old Boston should in many respect be kept with its former cow paths now turned into streets. Boston is really a historic Mecca. We all think so out my way. You will find more people from California here in the Hub this year than ever before.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

I am glad to notice in your paper that the Citizens Military Training Camps are beginning to function here in New England at Camp Devens, Fort Adams, Fort McKinley, Fort Ethan Allen and other places.

I am glad for this reason, because my boys who attended one of these camps during the past seasons have been greatly benefited physically and morally.

While no advocate of war, yet training for war does something for our youth in building up their morals. They know how to stand erect, they are taught to obey, to be punctual, to be honest, to treat the other fellow squarely. They are taught to get up at a certain time and to get sleep regularly. These may be minor matters, but I seek this opportunity of bearing witness that my boys have greatly progressed under military training, which at times is an improvement over some types of parental discipline.

FIND NEW CLUE TO '3X' KILLER

New York, July 7 (INS)—A new clue which they hoped would solve New York's "3-x killer" murders engaged police today in an examination of two slips of paper, turned over to authorities by girl companions of men shot to death in parked automobiles.

The slips bear the water-mark of the United States and detectives endeavored to trace the killer through the water mark and a red ink rubber stamp, which was used to imprint the name of Joseph Mozynsky, one of the victims, on the margin of the slips. On the lower left hand side was stamped "3-x" and in the lower right corner "3-x-097."

The girls said the slips were handed them by the murderer after he had killed their escorts.

Father of Slain Youth Sues Cop

Springfield, July 7 (AP)—The outgrowth of the shooting several months ago of Francis Turgeon of Holyoke by Patrolman Roy K. Dibble of West Springfield, while Turgeon and two other young men were alleged to have been breaking into an automobile salesroom, resulted today in action against the patrolman by Frank Turgeon, father of the young man, for $5000.

Mrs. Hoover Back as White House Hostess

Washington, July 7 (AP)—Mrs. Hoover presided again today over the socail and domestic affairs of the White House. After three months of virtual seclusion as a result of an injured back suffered in a fall, she returned late yesterday with the President from their Rapidan river lodge. Her coming was unexpected. It had been assumed that she would remain in the mountains most of this month.

Delicious Salad Wins Martha Lee's Weekly Prize

This Salad Is a Delicacy

Here's a delicious, seasonable and not too difficult summer salad, which wins the $5 prize for its author, Miss G. A. Drake, 604 East 5th st., South Boston, Mass.

TOMATO LOAF SALAD

2 cups Campbell's Tomato Soup.
2¼ tbsps. Plymouth Rock Gelatine.

½ cup chopped celery.
1 cup Icarde Mayonnaise.
½ cup chopped olives.
1 cup Pabsts grated cheese.
½ cup cold water.
¼ cup chopped pecan nuts.

If you are going on a vacation and want your house plants to be well watered, take a strip of soft white cloth one inch wide by two feet long and place one end in a large jar of water. Bury the other end in the dirt around the plant.

To pack bottles so that the corks will not leak, insert stoppers firmly and cover with the finger of an old kid glove. Tie down securely and stopper will not work loose.

If apple sauce seems tasteless, add a pinch of salt, a dash of cinnamon and a little grated lemon rind.

If powdered sugar hardens, put it through your fruit chopper and it will be very easy to work with again.

HOT WATER GINGERBREAD IS GOOD

Here's a Hot Water Gingerbread that's as delicious as it is economical.

Melt ½ cup shortening. Mix with ½ cup brown sugar, 1 cup molasses, and 2 well beaten eggs. Sift together 2 tsps. ginger, ½ tsp. clove, 1 tsp. cinnamon, ½ tsp. salt, 2½ cups flour, 1 tsp. baking soda. Add this alternately to the gingerbread mixture, with 1 cup boiling water. Bake in loaves, salad tins or muffin pans in moderate oven, 350° F., about 20 minutes.

Best Bottle for Baby

If your baby is bottle fed, the bottle itself deserves your particular attention. It is just as important that the baby's bottle should be sterile as that the milk formulas should be correct. In selecting the bottle be sure to choose one that can be cleansed thoroughly inside.

The best kind are the ones that are absolutely smooth on the inside, without a crack or crevice to trap particles of food, and will stand quick transference from boiling water to ice box and back again without fear of cracking. The regulation size is the 8 ounce bottle, and in addition to these are the new 4 ounce bottles for fruit juice, medicine, water, or special foods and extra feedings. Their lightness and size are a great convenience when travelling.

For the name of this convenient bottle in the new handy size just drop a line to Martha Lee, care of Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Muffin Hints

A chilled salad served with piping hot fluffy muffins is delicious for summer luncheon. But, in making your blueberry muffins don't forget that the blueberries must be carefully floured to prevent their sinking to the bottom of the muffins. The best way, is to spread the berries smoothly on a large sheet of clean paper and sift the flour over them until they are thoroughly covered. Turn into your colander and lightly shake off superfluous flour.

Use one cup of washed blueberries to ¼ cup of white vegetable shortening, 1-3 cup of sugar, ½ tsp. of salt, ¼ tsp. of cinnamon, 5 tsps. baking powder, 1 egg, 2½ cups of unbleached flower, 1 cup of milk. Cream the shortening and gradually add the sugar, beating thoroughly. Sift in one-quarter cup of flour and mix well. Add the well beaten egg and beat thoroughly. Use one-quarter cup flour to flour the berries and mix the remaining flour with the salt, baking powder and cinnamon. Add alternately with milk to the first mixture, stirring only enough to blend thoroughly. Add the berries lightly and turn into oiled and floured muffin pans and bake in a moderate oven 25 minutes (350 to 375 F.).

Real Southern Chicken Dinner for Cool Days

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over WHDH, by the Boston Evening American.

We are bound to have some cool days eventually, and when the heat does break, it's remarkable how the family's appetite peps up. And how interested they are in a hot dinner once more.

Martha Lee

At such a time, do try out this Real Southern Dinner on them — they'll appreciate it, I know. It's ideal for a special treat for week-end guests, too.

Diced Watermelon in Orange Juice
Southern Fried Chicken with Red Pineapple Wheels
Baked Corn Pudding
Pickled Georgia Peaches
Beaten Biscuits
Kentucky Pecan Cake or New Orleans Charlotte Russe
Prohibition Mint Julep
Pralines Coffee

For the Southern Fried Chicken, dry the birds and disjoint them. Roll each piece in seasoned flour (some people add a tsp. of baking powder to ½ cup flour, thinking that this makes the crust more porous). Brown the chicken quickly on both sides in chicken fat, sausage fat or butter. Pile in the center of a large platter and put where it will keep hot.

For the Pineapple Wheels, drain the syrup from a can of sliced pineapple, add a two-inch stick of cinnamon and enough red vegetable coloring to make a gorgeous deep red. Boil 3 minutes. Add pineapple slices and set aside until cool and the slices have taken a lovely shade. Drain and chill. Arrange cups of lettuce around the big platter of chicken, and place a red pineapple wheel in each, with a rosette of mayonnaise in the center. This will serve 8 and provide both the meat course and the salad.

For the Baked Corn Pudding, beat 3 egg yolks and add to 3 cups fresh corn cut from cob, or the canned corn that comes in whole kernels. Mix 1 tbsp. sugar, 1½ tsps. salt, 1 tbsp. flour and 1½ cups milk. Add this to the corn, with 3 tbsps. of melted butter and 2 chopped pimientos. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and pour into a buttered casserole. Bake in a medium, 350 deg. F., 30 to 40 minutes, or until a knife will come out clean. If over-cooked, it will separate like a custard. Serve direct from the casserole. (Serves 8.)

For the New Orleans Charlotte Russe, soak 1¼ tbsps. gelatine in 4 tbsps. cold water. Beat 4 egg yolks with 6 tbsps. sugar, add 2 cups scalded milk and cook in double boiler until creamy. Add gelatine and stir until dissolved. Add ¼ lb. crushed macaroons and 8 lady fingers and set aside to cool and set. When about to stiffen, add 1 cup moist cocoanut and fold in 1 cup beaten cream. Chill in ice box for several hours. Serve piled in glasses with a garnish of whipped cream and cherries. Serves 8.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Women's Exchange

MRS. G. P. of Sagamore ave., Chelsea, suggests that Mrs. G. A. F. soak the calloused foot in water as hot as can be borne, and to one quart of water add one rounding tablespoon of baking soda. Put your foot in this for not more than fifteen minutes.

Dry thoroughly, and then cover with court plaster rather than adhesive plaster, which she thinks draws too much. Shake a little foot-ease in the shoes, and she feels sure that great relief will be experienced. Mrs. P. suggests not letting the soles of the shoes wear too thin as an uneven road walked on in thin shoes will cause callouses.

Borax in the rinsing water will give the appearance of newness to a washed dress.

To remove old paint stains on clothing, apply butter, roll up over night and then apply chloroform.

New Lower Prices

at the New York Dress Mfg. Co. where they specialize in sample dresses and sell these at retail for wholesale prices and less. I didn't think anything possibly could be lower than their famous prices of $3.75 and $6.75 for those wonderful dresses of theirs. But now they come along with the startling announcement that they have established new prices — still lower — $2.75 and $5.75! Every one of these frocks is easily worth three or four times as much. Real linen ensembles — chiffon frocks with silk jackets. Tub frocks of all kinds—the very newest. It seems almost absurd to think of it—but if you can duplicate these dresses at these prices elsewhere—$2.75 and $5.75—they will give you the dress without charge. Exchanges and refunds within five days if tags have not been removed. The New York Dress Mfg. Co., 315 Washington St., 2nd floor (near West).

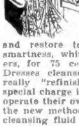
Don't Forget Your Flask—

of Summer Tan! It's a daring idea—and a dashing one! Instead of looking so hopelessly sensible—practical—and precautious—with all your bottles and tubes and jars of sunburn soothers, this year's model vacationist slings a swanky flask of Tre-jur Summer Tan over her shoulders and is off for the beach—with a complete supply of sunburn protection for a whole day of sand-lazing. Filene's is the first in town to show these Summer Tan Flasks. A good-sized bottle in a bright-colored case, with shoulder-straps that match your bathing togs. And the lotion contained in the flask is Tre-jur's wonderful Summer Tan—that prevents sunburn! If you smooth it over your skin before your dip—after your dip—as many times during your sand-lazing as you need, you'll have no hot, uncomfortable crimson sunburn—but a glorious coat of golden tan! It's a wonderful idea for all sorts of summer sports. The men can carry them, too, and they will find them most convenient for golf—when the sun becomes too hot on their neck and arms. For motoring, picnicking—no fear of confusing the sunburn lotion with the salad oil—if it's in a flask slung over your shoulders. I'm sure I don't know which I like best about this brand new idea—its convenience or its magical way of turning the unloveliest sight in all the world—a torch-red sunburn—into the loveliest gift the summer brings—a coat of golden summer tan! Do see these, before packing your vacation bags. They are $1.50 complete—in Filene's Toilet Goods Shop, street floor.

Cleansing Specials!

Here's a cleansing offer that will be specially welcome after the long holiday week-end. For it appeals to the menfolks as well as ourselves, Anne. The New England Dyers & Cleaners, Inc., charge but 75 cents for cleansing and properly pressing three-piece suits. And will cleanse and restore to their original smartness, white flannel trousers, for 75 cents. Plain Silk Dresses cleansed by them are really "refinished" and their special charge is but $1.25. They operate their own plant, and use the new method that keeps the cleansing fluid clear and clean, assuring expert and thorough cleansing. They offer free collection and delivery service, and give special prompt attention to Parcel Post orders. All goods insured while in their possession. New England Dyers & Cleansers, Inc., 109 Gardner St., West Roxbury, Parkway 6100.

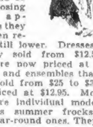


"Care-Free" Means

Hair-free! Legs and arms free and unblemished to show off a sleeveless frock—or a back-less bathing suit. Beautiful, satiny skin, to glow unmarred under your coat of summer tan. Care-free and hair-free, with all that shocking superfluous hair gone! It sounds almost too good to be true. But modern science has made it possible, with the electric needle, and Miss Elizabeth Sparkes has made it a most pleasant treatment, with her skilled hands. She is an electric needle expert who makes these unlovely growths disappear forever—without the least bit of discomfiture, and has special machines for removing hair from the limbs. Miss Sparkes will be glad to talk with you. Her 'phone number is Han. 7592, and she is at 120 Tremont St., Rm. 334.

Silvers Vacate July 15th

All their lovely dresses must go before that date—and all their stunning coats must be disposed of before they close the charming little shop that has meant such smart values to us all. They still have a large stock of things on hand, and as the closing date approaches they have been reduced still lower. Dresses that formerly sold from $12.50 to $19.50 are now priced at $6.75. Dresses and ensembles that formerly sold from $25 to $39 are now priced at $12.95. Most of these are individual models of gorgeous summer frocks and some year-round ones. They still have about 50 summer and winter coats that they have reduced to one-third of their original price. I'm sure you can use one of these marvelous coat bargains for your vacation trip — and plenty of their dresses. Silver's Specialty Shop, 59 Temple Place, 5th floor. Open Saturday for this sale.



Eugene Waves, $10

These are the waves for the pretty miss whose hair is her pride and joy. It transforms coarse, straight hair—or soft, fine hair—into sculptured ripples and curly ends—for it has special pads for each hair texture. The Eugene wave is usually much higher priced than $10—but Lillian E. Cunningham gives it for $10, using the genuine Eugene sachets and fluids. Her hairdressing experience of 20 years is assurance enough that she will give you a soft, becoming wave—and if you prefer other methods, she is equipped with Frederics, Nestle and Bonat systems. Special treatments for fading and falling hair. Lillian E. Cunningham, 561 Boylston St., Back Bay 9069.

Allison and Van Ryn Win Doubles Title

Welterweight Division Lacks Real Champ

Mr. Boston believes the welterweight division is still lacking a real champion.

"The welterweight class has been without a champion who could lick all-comers since Jack Britton was at the height of his career," said Mr. Boston.

Jack Conway

"Young Jack Thompson, who won the title by defeating Jackie Fields in Detroit, is the latest boss of the welterweight group to take it on the chin in a non-title match.

"According to stories from the coast, Thompson received a sound thrashing from Young Corbett, III, in their tussle at San Francisco. In the ninth round Corbett had the champion down for a count of nine.

"Since Britton started to slip, nobody has bobbed to the front in the welterweight division who could whirl into action against any kind of opposition confident he was going to win.

"Mickey Walker won the title from Britton. At the time the Toy Bulldog was at the peak of his form, and would have proved a great champion if he had kept active. Dave Shade was named as the challenger by the New York Athletic Commission. Walker remained idle rather than tackle Shade. Mickey finally was forced to take on Shade, and won a close decision.

"Inactivity made it difficult for Walker to make the welterweight limit. He started to slip and was beaten by Pete Latzo at Scranton, Pa. Latzo was a flop as a champion and lost his title to Joe Dundee.

Dundee Went Back After He Won the Title

"Dundee was a great fighter as he fought his way to the championship. On the way up he stopped Walker and licked other first class opposition. But once Dundee was title holder the curse that seems to follow rulers of this division fell on him. He was knocked out by Young Jack Thompson in a non-title bout in Chicago, while Al Mello beat him twice in Boston. Dundee was soft picking for Johnny Indrisano.

"Joe was finally forced into a ring with Jackie Fields at Detroit in a championship quarrel. He lost, as everybody expected he would.

"Fields has been a good fighter on the way to the welterweight throne, but, like his predecessors, lost his fire as soon as he became champion. Boston fans will long remember the miserable exhibition of boxing Fields gave against Gorilla Jones at the Garden.

"Fields in turn was whipped by Young Jack Thompson at Detroit.

"Thompson adopted the tactics of his predecessors and insisted that Corbett enter the ring over weight for the match on the coast. Otherwise he would have dropped his title.

More Action Would Help the Champions

"Inactivity and the fear of losing have been the big burdens for the welterweight champions. Youngsters require work in the ring under fire to reach the front ranks in the boxing game. And when they have got to the top they require plenty of boxing against first class opponents to enable them to retain their form.

"Champions don't become cowards, but some of them are so fearful lest they lose their precious titles that they become over cautious. And a fighter who fails to take a chance cannot hope to go anywhere in the boxing game. I have often felt that many a promising ring star has been ruined by winning a title too early in his career.

"Championships bring so much wealth that one cannot blame the manager of a title holder from dodging risky matches and picking the soft touches, but at the same time one cannot get away from the fact that timidity and safety first methods have wrecked the welterweight division.

"Give me one of those old-fashioned welterweight champions like Honey Mellody, Jack Britton or Ted (Kid) Lewis."

Young Track Stars in Junior Olympics

Atlantic City, July 7 (INS)—Thirty of the best juvenile athletes in the United States and Hawaii were assembled here today to participate in the junior Olympic games.

These boy athletes were winners of elimination contests held throughout the country. More than a million boys participated.

JONES FACES BIG TASK IN U. S. OPEN

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, July 7 (INS)—The overture is stilled, the lights are lowering and, out in the body of the house, falls the vital, tingling hush that seems to be the inevitable prelude to a big moment.

The curtain is about to rise upon the drama that only a great open golf championship can inspire, greater than ever this time because Bobby Jones, the big two-title man just in from England, is playing everybody for his third championship of the year, and the thing they call human-interest will go in for a veritable orgy of emotionalism.

The open championship will be played over the Interlachen course at Minneapolis on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, and, while the pressure of the 72-hole contest is on, its suspense will fairly clutch a nation by the throat.

Jones, back from England and his tremendous victories in the British amateur and open championships, is the sentimental favorite because the four major championships of America and England are the goal of his heart's desire and everybody loves a winner.

He also is the practical favorite, it being considered execrable taste to bet against success. And Jones, with his record of eleven major titles since 1923 and the fact, that, with one exception, he has been no worse than second in the open since that year, represents more than success. He practically stands for infallibility.

Odds Are Against Jones This Time

The odds say he will fail this time. He has won too much; tired, sated with honors, he is due to lose. Some trace an affinity between Interlachen and Oakmont and aver that this isn't the type they call a Jones course, which is so much hair tonic. When Jones is playing golf, every course is strictly a Jones course.

However, no one has the temerity to ask, who will beat Jones at Interlachen? A more sensible query would be, who can beat him?

There are four men who face a great chance of success in this connection, namely, Horton Smith, Leo Diegel, Ed Dudley and Walter Hagen, provided he is the rejuvenated specimen they call him to be.

To this list might be added the names of Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell and possibly Mac Smith, Al Espinosa and George Von Elm. The latter is always held out as a pre-tournament threat in the open and always the posting of the final returns finds him languishing in the outer darkness. Maybe he is due this time. I don't think so.

Neither do I think that Espinosa is the man to recover from the 23-stroke denouement by which Jones won the 1929 championship in a play-off that was strictly a pay-off from the moment they arrived at the first tee. Nor is Mac Smith the man he once was—and it is a matter of record that, whatever he was, it wasn't enough.

Hagen Is Arch Rival of Jones

Hagen, fresh, supposedly well trained and doubtless determined, looks the part of Jones' arch-rival. He is without a title of any kind for the first time in years, and, with this inspiration to goad him on, Hagen will take plenty of convincing.

Sarazen, another ex-champion, who has staked everything on the winning of the open, is playing his irons with all of the old precision, which means trouble for anybody and everybody.

Farrell, the 1928 champion, showed a flash of the old stuff in the New York State open and may again be the man he was two years ago.

Diegel would have won his first open in 1920, if Chick Evans hadn't taken so much trouble to tell him how to do it. He has won none since. He is due now.

Rosenberg May Not Join Giants

New York, July 7 (INS)—Doubt existed today as to whether Harry Rosenberg, outfielder of the Mission club of the Pacific Coast League, would join the New York Giants.

One report said that Rosenberg sent word to Manager John McGraw that he would not report unless he got a share of his purchase price. McGraw decided at first he would let him stay in California, but later, it was said, he changed his mind and started further negotiations with the Coast star.

WORLD'S CHAMPION DOWN---AND NEARLY OUT

THOMPSON TO BOX INDRISANO

San Francisco, July 7 (INS)—Young Jack Thompson, world's welterweight champion, today tentatively had accepted three non-title bouts.

The first probably will be against Johnny Indrisano of Boston at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, in August. The other two bouts being negotiated will be with Tom Freeman in Cleveland and Bucky Lawless in Detroit, where Thompson annexed his title by beating Jackie Fields.

Thompson in his last ring appearance against Young Corbett on the coast took a severe pummeling. The bout was a non-title affair. Corbett had Thompson in a bad way in the ninth round, when he knocked him down for the count of nine.

Babe Hopes to Play Tomorrow

Washington, July 7 (INS)—Babe Ruth is still out of the Yankees' lineup, suffering today from a swollen thumb caused by a thump received in batting practice in Philadelphia. He hopes to play tomorrow in New York against the Athletics.

St. Pius Nine Wins 8th Straight Game

St. Pius Cubs of Lynn won their eighth straight game when they took the Burroughs Newsboys at Memorial Park, Lynn, into camp by the score of 9 to 8. The game was called in the seventh on account of rain.

Jim Greenlaw and Benedetto, the latter captain-elect of Lynn Classical, featured at the bat for the winners, the former getting a homer and double, while the latter slammed out three hits.

John Greenlaw, Lynn English high star, was in great form, holding the Newsboys to eight scattered hits. Frisoni, cleanup batter for the losers, spanked out a home run and a double.

Walter Johnson, Jr., Regains Health

Washington, July 7 (AP)—It was only a few months ago that the sport dopesters were saying the baseball career of Walter Johnson, Jr., had ended before it was fairly begun.

Last winter, the youngster, 15 years old, was run down by an automobile. Both legs were broken and it was feared for a time that one might have to be amputated.

The youthful pitcher with the great name opened the game for Bethesda sand-lotters and retired after two innings because his father felt he should take no chances with his legs by going to bat and running bases.

Diamond Pick-Ups

Tom Oliver's single in the fifth inning of the Sabbath game was his 100th safety of the season. The Sox have yet to reach the half-way mark, so if the "Little Rebel" can maintain his present pace for the rest of the way, he will be in the 200-hits class at the finish, a most remarkable feat for a first-year player.

President Bob Quinn didn't open the gates for the Sunday game until 2:30 p. m., figuring that the rain which fell all morning and kept away thousands of out-of-town customers would start again. When it failed to start, he ordered the game played. Rather than disappoint the small gathering that was waiting to get in, he sacrificed plenty of money.

Manager Heinie Wagner and his players have had very few arguments with umpires this season. They all rather felt that it would look as though they were offering an alibi for their poor work if they questioned decisions. But they just couldn't stand Campbell and Geisel, and opened up plenty.

On one occasion, Al Simmons stepped out of the box as MacFayden started his wind-up. Up came Campbell's hand and MacFayden had to strain himself to prevent throwing the ball. "He can't do that," yelled Wagner, referring to Simmons, and he was absolutely right, but Campbell ignored him.

Tommy Connolly, Natick veteran, was the third "ump" in the series. He was as good as his mates were poor. He has slowed up after more than 30 years of service, but he still knows how to call 'em. He had several conferences with Geisel late in the game and judging from the latter's actions is seemed as though the veteran had declared that he could see that Webb's smash was fair from his position back of first.

Mandell Training to Defend Title

Orangeburg, N. Y., July 7—Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion of the world, is preparing to defend his title for the fourth time since he gained the laurels in 1926 by besting Rocky Kansas.

Sammy is scheduled to step into the ring against Al Singer at the Yankee Stadium on July 17 and he looks for perhaps the hardest fight in defense of his title.

WANT TILDEN ON DAVIS CUP TEAM

Philadelphia, July 7 (AP)—Hope has not been abandoned here that William T. Tilden will be a member of the United States tennis team which will meet the French racquet wielders in the Davis cup final.

"Big Bill" is said to be under contract with a news syndicate to write articles on the Davis cup matches, which is contrary to the rule of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

This was said to be known to Joseph W. Wear, chairman of the United States Davis cup committee, who expressed the hope after the Philadelphia had won the British tennis title, that Tilden would play in the Davis cup matches.

Mr. Wear has declined to talk for publication regarding Tilden's eligibility, but it is believed that an effort may be made to find a way which would make Tilden free to play in the Davis cup tournament.

Kerwin Myers Quits as Sculler

Philadelphia, July 7 (AP)—Kerwin Myers, national amateur sculling champion in 1929, says he is through as a singles sculler in competition, but will continue as a sweep oarsman.

"I guess I've lost the desire to row in singles," he was quoted as saying. "A year ago, 10 and 12 miles wasn't anything for me, but this season, when I go up the course and row four and five miles in a shell, I've got all I want."

"I will continue to row in the Bachelors' barge club senior four-oared shell and expect to go to the national regatta at Boston in August."

Games Wanted

The Milrock Club of Dorchester are seeking baseball games with any of the fast amateur teams in Greater Boston. For games phone B. E. O'Neil, Talbot 1785.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

What is it, exactly, that you are to do when, say, you have teed a ball and are making ready to drive? Have you ever really asked yourself that with regard to any golf shot. If you haven't, pick yourself up a brand new golfing habit right here, because you cannot do a thing unless you know generally, that you want to drive the confounded ball away from there. But that's where the trouble comes from, since you know that only generally. You must know what you want to do exactly, and between generally and exactly there is a vast difference. Go about your drive, mentally, in this fashion: Sight the line your ball is to take. Pick out a spot down the way where you intend it to be when next you come up to it. If there is trouble along the route select a line that misses it safely. Take into consideration anything else out there that calls for consideration. Then put the decision you have made in abeyance. You now know just where the ball is to go. Now swing. And as you swing make sure you are concerning yourself with nothing but your swing—and the ball.

Coggeshall Wins Tourney by Default

Chicago, July 7—Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines, won the Western tennis championship by default yesterday when Clifford Sutter, New Orleans, hurt his leg in the midst of their match.

The play had gone 1—6, 6—2, 6—4, 4—6, and then 5—5 in the last set, when Sutter, the national intercollegiate champion, was forced to limp off the court with a strained tendon, suffered when he leaped for a ball.

SCHMELING IS ORDERED TO REST

Berlin, July 7 (AP)—Max Schmeling, German heavyweight who won the world's championship from Jack Sharkey on a foul last month, today was ordered by physicians to rest two or three months before resuming training.

The report of the physician, submitted to the German boxing commission, stated that Schmeling was suffering from varicocele of the right side as a result of the foul.

The report will be taken up by the commission tomorrow. Meanwhile it was taken to mean that there would be no return bout for the immediate present.

According to the physician, Schmeling's injury is of such a nature that sporting authorities who read the report interpreted it to mean there would be no participation by the German fighter in a championship contest possibly until 1931, if then.

Gallant Fox Ready for Arlington Classic

Chicago, July 7 (AP)—Already acclaimed the season's three-year-old champion, but still after prize money, William Woodward's Gallant Fox will make his first Chicago appearance Saturday in the second renewal of the Arlington classic.

The "Big Horse" yesterday made his first serious training move for the $60,000 race, with Earl Sande, the other half of the championship combination, in the saddle. The Fox easily turned in a 1:50 2-5 mile on a drying-out track, a performance which satisfied Trainer George Tappan, who is in charge until James Fitzsimmons reaches Chicago.

DEFEAT LOTT AND DOEG IN 3 SETS

Wimbledon, Eng., July 7 (AP)—John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, young American tennis stars, won the British men's doubles championship today for the second successive year, beating their countrymen, John Doeg and George Lott, in straight sets in the final. The scores were 6—3, 6—3, 6—2.

Seven thousand, five hundred spectators who had come to watch the two strong American pairs fight it out in what was expected to be a gripping five-set match saw Van Ryn and Allison, at the peak of their form, sink Lott and Doeg without a trace. Not even Doeg's famous service could keep his team in the running.

Doeg kept the crowd interested by his terrific service, which is as fierce as Tilden's, but off the ground he was weak, and against their well-matched and superbly equipped opponents Lott and Doeg never had a chance. On the whole, the unequal contest came as something of an anti-climax.

When the match ended the winners threw their racquets into the air, and as Allison left the court his bride of a few months embraced him and also Van Ryn.

On the way to their title Van Ryn and Allison eliminated Britain's two best pairs—Henry Austin and J. S. Olliff and J. Colin Gregory and Ian G. Collins.

Red Sox Are Getting Poor Deal From Umpires

LOCALS ARE DEPRIVED OF VICTORY

By JOE CASHMAN

All future games between the pennant contenders and second division clubs of the American League in which Umpires Dick Campbell and Harry "Call Me Miste." Geisel are going to officiate may as well be called off at once.

It will be only a waste of time playing them, for these two "umps" have decided that the leaders can't lose.

Joe Cashman

Of course, the arbiters won't admit anything of the sort, but all who saw them work in the A's-Red Sox series are sure of it and 50,000 fans can't be wrong, even though Geisel and Campbell, who specialize in being wrong, may think so.

There has been a lot of poor officiating since the start of baseball but none worse than these two arbiters displayed in the last four games in the Hub.

We know that, without having seen every game ever played, because poorer umpiring than they displayed is an impossibility.

Umpires, make mistakes like everybody else and oftentimes they are right when the fans think they are wrong. The majority of them are honest, fearless and, everything considered, do a fair job. Consequently their occasional errors should be overlooked.

Giesel and Campbell Are Poor Umpires

On the other hand, there are incompetent umpires, whose presence on a staff hurts baseball, and for the good of the game these deserve to be criticized and driven out, if possible. Geisel and Campbell belong in this class.

We wouldn't go any further than to rate the pair incompetent, but the fans will go so far as to say that they are both prejudiced and unfair.

Umpires who give such an impression, be it correct or no, have no business to be retained.

Campbell and Geisel were bad the first day, worse the next and there aren't enough adjectives to describe how rank they were on the Sabbath.

Incompetent or whatever they are, they robbed the Sox of a victory beyond a shadow of doubt.

In the third inning, with the natives trailing by two runs, Earl Webb hit a mighty drive to left field with two mates on. The ball landed squarely on the lines, throwing the white chalk in all directions. Two Sox runs came over the plate and Webb reached third.

Campbell, who had no business to rule on the drive with Geisel back of third for just such a purpose, called it a foul. Geisel was mum. Both "umps" saw it and if they didn't see it hit fair, they should resign immediately, for they are blind.

The ball landed so hard on the line that the mark will probably remain until the Wigwam is locked up for the season. Either official could have gone out and seen where it landed.

Umpires Try to Prevent Photos of Play

They even went further and ordered photographers who attempted to take pictures of the spot off the field.

Then Campbell resumed his stance back of the plate and tried for the rest of the afternoon to see how many he could call wrong.

If Danny MacFayden threw one, he threw 20 perfect strikes which were called balls. Neither of the two runs the A's scored later in the game would have counted had not perfect groove strikes been called balls.

Then, in the eighth inning, with the score 3 to 2 in favor of the enemy, Scarritt singled and Webb hit another ball down in the left field corner, fair. Simmons threw to Dykes to get Scarritt and the runner and ball arrived together.

Some moments later, Campbell arrived on the scene, pulled the players apart, alleged he saw Scarritt's foot off the bag and ruled him out to kill the Sox' last chance.

We don't know whether he was out or not, but neither does Campbell. He didn't see the play until long after it happened and according to the rules, the runner is safe if the "ump" misses the play.

In the first three games, these arbiters were almost as bad, both on the bases and behind the plate. The A's, like a king, could do no wrong; the Sox were never right.

Baseball is absolutely on the level but the game always has critics who insist that it isn't. This group should be given no chance to squawk and umpires who, for some cause or other, make the game look bad as Geisel and Campbell have done here this year, should be replaced.

SPEED BOATS IN QUINCY REGATTA

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Quincy, one of the up and coming cities of Greater Boston, will flash to the front with a tercentenary celebration on Saturday with plenty of speed and thrills.

The blow-off of the tercentenary celebration will come in the form of a monster speed boat regatta, which is booked to start at 11 o'clock in the morning.

Eighty of the nationally known outboard speed boat drivers will get into the splash and compete for the $2000 cash prizes for professionals, with many other trophies for the amateur drivers, which will be known as the state tercentennial trophies.

The course, which is a rectangu-one of 2½ miles, will afford the spectators plenty of opportunity to witness the thrills, as it lies between Atlantic and Merrymount.

This race meet is sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association, and all records established will go down as official world's records.

Officials expect that this year's racing will establish a new record gathering of spectators. During the regattas last year it was judged that over 100,000 visited the water front at Wollaston to witness the competition. Saturday should see a record crowd for a single day of the sport.

Mayor Thomas H. McGrath has left nothing undone in preparations for the races. He is using every precaution for the safety of the drivers and spectators. Fire Chief Meade has instructed firemen to be on hand to man the pulmotors, extinguishers, etc., in case of any accidents.

Every Precaution to Prevent Accidents

Police will patrol the beach the entire distance of the course, under command of Capt. Costello of the Metropolitan District Commission, while Capt. Holbrook of the South Boston life saving station, Coast Guard, will be on hand with his boat, properly manned, for the occasion.

Nurses and doctors will find their places on the Red Cross boat, which will also be a fast-traveling launch, while the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht Clubs will have speedboats to rush to the overturned crafts should they be needed. The latter craft will be used mostly as pickup boats.

Following the races, a dinner will be served at the Wollaston Yacht Club for those participating in the regatta. Then a band concert will be enjoyed on the beach bandstand from 7:30 to 9:30, after which eight and one-half miles of illumination, under the supervision of Commissioner Holbrook, assisted by 300 Boy Scouts, will take place.

Fate Robbed Lassman of Health and Ring Title

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

HEAD INJURY IN FOOTBALL COSTLY

By JACK CONWAY

Al Lassman, famous New York University tackle who was drowned at Harrison, Me., might have become heavyweight champion of the world if it had not been for a series of unfortunate accidents which led up to his tragic death.

Standing 6 feet 2 inches in height and weighing 220 pounds, Lassman was a handsome physical specimen.

The Cambridge athlete had a greater love for boxing than for football, at which he became famous.

Al boxed as an amateur in Boston rings. His remarkable punching power and amazing skill enabled him to topple the ordinary opposition.

Every manager of professional boxers in New England tried to sign Lassman to a contract. He was keen to make a bid for the world's heavyweight championship, but he felt there would be plenty of time for him to do this after he completed a college education.

So Lassman went to New York University, where he developed into one of the greatest football stars the game has known. He played tackle and won a place on the all-American team.

Football Injury Halted Al's Athletic Career

Football was responsible for the injury which ruined Lassman as an athlete and changed his entire life.

Playing against Carnegie Tech on November 24, 1928, Lassman received a head injury.

Al's skull was fractured and for weeks he fought to regain his health. He never completely won this fight.

I met Lassman at Miami Beach during the winter of 1929. He was in the company of Chick Meehan, New York University coach. Meehan had taken Lassman South in the hope that the warm Florida sun would nurse the big fellow back to health.

Lassman still looked the part of a great athlete, but he suffered severely from the effects of his head injuries. He could not remember a single thing that had happened during the 1928 football season. His mind was a complete blank, he told me, in regard to the game in which he was hurt.

Al, however, could remember boxing as an amateur in Boston. He also recalled many of his friends in this city. He still had hopes of entering the pro ring, but I told him he would probably do better if he got a job as a football coach at one of the big colleges.

Lassman was again at Miami Beach last winter. I talked with him and he appeared in much better condition than he had the previous winter. Al, however, was far from being his old self. He still showed the effects of the terrific banging he had received in the Pittsburgh Tech game.

Gave Up Plan to Enter Pro Ring

The Cambridge boy had given up all hopes of entering the ring. He realized his physical condition would not permit him to trade blows with sturdy rivals under the flickering glare of the calcium. He talked with enthusiasm of his boxing in Boston and at college, and keenly regretted he would be unable to try to emulate Gene Tunney.

Al's big problem in life had become the winning back of his own health rather than the capturing of the heavyweight championship of the world.

He was still the same big, handsome fellow he was when boxing and as a football star. He had the friendship and good wishes of everybody.

Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football coach, who was also fighting illness at Miami Beach, spent much time with Lassman and gave him valuable advice and assistance.

Lassman's condition was a great tragedy to everybody who knew the possibilities of the former college star. They realized that one of the greatest athletic careers in the history of sport had suddenly been cut down by a terrific smash in the head.

Fate, indeed, was very unkind to Al Lassman. It not only stopped him in his climb to fame, but it also took from him the full power of his marvelous body.

Hopedale Wins in 11th Inning, 8-7

The Hopedales of Allston nosed out Revere A. A., 3 to 2, in 11 innings; Newton Upper Falls defeated Mt. Hope, 8 to 7, and Hyde Park shut out Jamica Board of Trade, 5 to 0, in the Hub Twilight League yesterday.

Eddie Mannix of the Hopedales won his own game by hitting a double to score the tying run in the ninth and a triple for the winning run in the 11th inning.

George Corrigan of Hyde Park also figured prominently in his team's win. He held the opposition to five hits, struck out 11 and made his fourth home run in as many league games.

LASSMAN DURING HAPPY DAYS

AL LASSMAN romped along the sands at Miami Beach last winter as he tried gallantly to win back his health lost playing football.

MAYBE THE COLORFUL Al Lassman would have developed into another Gene Tunney if treated more kindly by Fate.

THE NEW HAVEN R.R.

NEW HALF-MILE SWIM RECORD

Long Beach, Cal., July 7—Another world record was broken yesterday in the National A. A. U. swimming meet when Clarence Crabbe of the Los Angeles Athletic Club defeated Maiola Kalili, Hawaiian, to win the half-mile free style in 10:20 4-10. The former record, 10:22 2-10, was set by Johnny Weismuller in 1927, at Honolulu.

In the women's 220-yard breast stroke, Margaret Hoffman of the Scranton, Pa., Swimming Association scored an upset by defeating the titleholder, Agnes Geraghty, New York Women's Association, in 3:30.

Chapin Captures Pair of Canoe Title Events

Worcester, July 7—Repeating his sterling performance of Saturday, when he captured two first places at the eastern division meet of the American Canoe Association held at Lake Quinsigamond, Howard Chapin of the Omicron Delta Canoe Association, Waltham, again emerged with premier laurels in the second day's races of the regatta.

Chapin exhibited a powerful and smooth-stroking paddle to win the championship single blade, single and the senior double blade, single races as well as placing second in the championship double blade, single event. The Waltham lad was the iron man of the day for he also teamed up with Ed Hann to take third place in the senior single blade tandem race.

In both of the events in which he emerged with first honors, Chapin was forced to come up from behind with spectacular sprints. Jerry Mosher of the Crescent Canoe Club, Waltham, set the pace in the senior double blade single event, leading right up to the finish line only to have Chapin nip him at the end in what appeared to be a dead heat.

In the championship, single blade single, Chapin uncorked a powerful sprint to pass Francis Bingham of the Samoset Canoe Club, West Roxbury, after the latter had led from the start.

INMATE BEATEN; 2 GUARDS HELD

Danvers, July 7—Two attendants at the State Hospital here are under arrest today in connection with a brutal beating administered to an elderly patient because he refused to go to bed when ordered.

They are Charles Webster, 30, of Haverhill, and Alexander B. Chasnovitz, 30, of Lawrence.

The patient beaten was Charles A. Nelson, 53. He has two broken ribs and numerous other injuries. For a time it was feared that he would die.

Indications are that Nelson was pounded into semiconsciousness and that his assailants then jumped upon his prostrate body, kicking and trampling him.

Hospital officials, after an investigation of their own, called in the police and also referred the matter to the attention of Dist.-Atty. William G. Clark.

Dr. Bonner said that the hospital authorities would not stand for abuse of any patient by attendants, and he recommended that the case be prosecuted vigorously.

DRAPER BACKS HEARST SHOOT

Onset, July 7—Citizens Military Training Camps, the Hearst Rifle Shoot and similar institutions are valuable in building up American manhood, former State Senator Eben S. Draper, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, said at Community church here yesterday.

He appealed to parents to send their sons to the Citizens Military Training Camps, not alone for the rudimentary training in soldier life, but for the lessons learned in discipline that are applicable in every day life.

Ex-Senator Draper was one in a series of Sunday afternoon speakers at the Community church. Senator David I. Walsh will speak at the church next Sunday.

Cab Driver, Taken for Ride, Writes Note, Saves Life

Chicago, July 7 (AP)—George Richardson, a taxicab driver, never was a literary man, but he wrote one gem yesterday that saved his life.

Richardson's cab had been commandeered by a robber. He compelled Richardson to drive him from one filling station to another, robbing them.

"When we get through," the robber told Richardson, "I'm going to kill you."

So Richardson, with the perspiration streaming down his neck, secretly went literary. He wrote a note, which he dropped to the highway.

"I am taking myself for a ride, but I can't help it," he wrote. "We're headed for Indiana Point, Fox Lake. Help! Help!"

A farmer found the note and telephoned ahead to a deputy sheriff, who blocked the road and stopped the cab.

He arrested Richardson's passenger, who said he was John Sullivan.

LYNN WOMEN ASK REPEAL OF STATE DRY LAW

New England Starts 'Save-a-Life' Drive

Girls Visit the German Prisoners

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

One convoy of wounded after another is the lot of the women's ambulance corps of which Helen Smith is a member. Commandant whom Tosh has christened "Mrs. Itch," is a hard task-master. Strenuous work, little sleep and poor food show on the girls. When Smithy's mother writes giving her silly war views "Smithy" pictures the war-ravaged men revolts. But letters from her war-worse sister, Trix, are treats. Deaths are numerous and heart-rending. "Mrs. Itch" questions the girls regarding Tosh's and Skinny's argument, which led to a fight. Skinny is sent home. The Fun, a mental wreck, has fits of screaming.

CHAPTER 22

We know surprisingly little about the war here, only we gather from odd out-of-date scraps in the papers and things the sitters tell. If the sitters have advanced on their small frontage we are winning and there will soon be peace; if they have retreated we are losing and God knows when it will end.

When the great peace comes Tosh is going to retire to bed for a month, but I am hoping Aunt Helen will die and leave me her money in which case I will take a trip around the world. I was telling Tosh this when we barged clean into two officers round a blind bend.

"Well, I'm blowed!" exclaimed one of them. "Old Tosh!"

"Chump!" Tosh delightedly seized the speaker by the hand and pumped energetically. "What the hell are you doing in this home from home?"

"I've been here eight weeks."

"I can beat that—I've had eight months."

Tosh then introduced me and he introduced the other man, a Capt. Baynton, who asked where we were going. Tosh airily informed him that we were absent without leave and had no plans.

Then, suggested Capt. Bayton why not come with them; they were bound for a concert in the German Prisoners' Compound. Toshs' friend thought this a top-hole brainwave, and Tosh said she was game if I was, though we'd probably be set to rebuild the convoy as punishment if Commandant found out.

"She's pretty bloody, isn't she?" asked Chump.

Tosh replied that if she said what she thought of Commandant in public she'd be put in clink for a year. So off we ploughed through the mud, laughing.

Sink in Mud

Officers Not Tight

It was good to laugh again. By the time we reached the Prisoners' Compound I felt quite young. It was quite an imposing affair. The prisoners had built it entirely. There were corrugated tin huts and a big recreation room—islands in a sea of mud. The outside barricade was quite unnecessary. Any unfortunate prisoner who tried to escape would be wallowing up to the neck in thick, greasy mud before he had gone a yard.

The planks laid down for us to walk on had sunk a foot deep. One false step and overboard we would have gone. Chump thanked God he was not tight as usual and proved his assertion by walking the chalkline for us, holding up the hem of his British warm coyly like a woman with a train and swaying over the mud at a perilous angle. Tosh laughed so much at his antics she nearly fell in herself.

The officer in charge met us at the entrance to the recreation room. He was a pal of Chump's, so we had no difficulty in being admitted. The concert would begin in five minutes. We were the only visitors; in fact, Tosh and I were the first women to visit the compound.

German Ballads

Done by Prisoner

Had be had any idea of the honor he would have had some special programs done; as it was he only had these poor things—meant for Chump and Baynton, handing us two postcards most exquisitely engraved in red and black scroll work the edges with a fine circle design and at the top a winged head rather reminiscent of the R. F. C. badge. He was privately very bucked, we could tell, by our admiration and told us the man responsible was a famous German black-and-white artist.

While they talked on one side, Tosh translated the program for me. There were German ballads on the piano, a wedding song and a humorous recitation entitled Heinrich Fliegenbutton but mostly the items were choral selections—Verlassen, Verlassen and similar things. We then went inside, where I had the shock of my young life. We were seated in a big cage with bars—iron bars—exactly like a cage at the zoo.

I shall never stare at an animal in a cage again; I shall feel

6 GOVERNORS TO MEET IN BOSTON

Conference at State House to Attack Squarely Problem of Highway Deaths

A "Save-a-Life" campaign throughout the New England States against automobile accidents will be launched August 1 and conducted for the entire month.

It will be the first joint movement ever undertaken in this country by a group of states to meet the ever-increasing motor hazard.

The decision to conduct the drive is announced by John F. Griffin, commissioner of motor vehicles of New Hampshire and president of the Eastern Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators.

GOVERNORS MEET

Recognizing the seriousness of the problem, the Governors of all the New England states will meet at the State House, Boston, late in July to draw up final plans for the campaign and to issue proclamations which will be sent to every city and town asking for co-operation of local officials, civic bodies and private citizens.

Sitting in session with the Governors will be the motor vehicle heads of each state. The latter, following out general policies at the conference and benefiting by the interchange of ideas as to methods, will handle the administration and enforcement of the campaign in their own territories, independently.

By reaching in two directions, two important causes of automobile accidents will be covered, namely:

First, there will be an intensive educational move to deal with the human element. Second, there will be a definite attack on faulty mechanism.

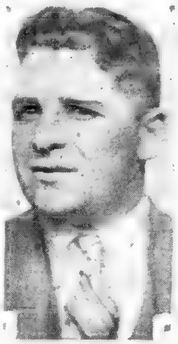
BROADCAST SAFETY

The educational part will be performed largely by civic organizations, safety councils and similar groups. Safety of New England highways will be broadcast as an incentive to tourists.

The work on faulty equipment will be so strictly conducted by state officials that it is expected that by Sept. 1 every motor vehicle operating in the six states will have been inspected and approved as being safe to operate upon the highways. The inspections will include brakes, lights, horn, steering mechanism and other safety devices. Some states will do the work through official inspection stations, others will use inspectors.

As evidence that the cars are in good order in Massachusetts and in some of the other states, inspection certificates will be issued. Windshield stickers will be used in some states.

Drowning Victim



UNABLE TO SWIM, Benjamin Wolf, of 278 West Fifth st., South Boston, was drowned off Peddock's Island yesterday when a small rowboat capsized as he and two friends were rowing to shore from a fishing launch. His companions were saved.

BOY, 6, VICTIM OF AUTO

Crossing Marion st., East Boston, in front of his home, William H. Flaherty, six, was fatally injured by an automobile today.

William S. Shaw, 54, of York ter., Melrose Highlands, driver of the car that struck him, was arraigned in East Boston court on manslaughter and reckless driving charges an hour after the accident.

The victim suffered a fractured skull and died 20 minutes after being hit. Shaw rushed him to East Boston relief station.

Shaw was arrested by Special Officer Peter McCoy and in court pleaded not guilty to both charges, being held in $1000 for hearing July 15.

Admiral Byrd Ends New Hampshire Visit

Dublin, N. H., July 7—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Antarctic explorer, after three-days' rest under the foothills of Monadnock, at his summer estate, left last night for somewhere, his destination not announced. It is reported that he will be guest at a banquet in his honor in New York, tonight.

He is expected to return about July 13.

Charlestown Fire Still Smouldering

The tons of water poured into the fire on Medford st., Charlestown, Friday night, and the tons that have been poured into it since that time, did not prevent the smouldering ruins from assuming a dangerous condition yesterday, and it was necessary to have the fireboat on duty there the greater part of the day, as well as two lines of hose from hydrants on Medford st., to keep the blaze from spreading.

No cause for the origin has yet been determined. Some of the firemen are looking for their fire hats and rubber coats that were taken by "volunteer" firemen the night of the blaze and not returned.

ONE DROWNED 2 SAVED AS BOAT TIPS

South Boston Man, Unable to Swim, Goes to Death in View of Friends

Unable to swim, Benjamin Wolf, 25, of 278 West Fifth st., South Boston, was drowned yesterday when a rowboat capsized off Peddock's Island. Two companions were rescued.

Wolf was one of a fishing party which left South Boston in the early morning in a small motorboat.

Those rescued are Edward Reardon of Fourth st., and John White of 223 West Fourth st., South Boston. White was in the Sturgis Hospital, Hull, last night, suffering from immersion and exposure.

UNABLE TO HELP

The tragedy occurred when members of the fishing party determined to go ashore at Peddock's Island, while at anchor off that part of it known as West Head. White, Reardon and Wolf all got into the small tender which the motorboat dragged, and started for the beach. Twenty-five yards from shore the tender capsized, and they were thrown into the water.

Wolf was apparently drowned without even coming to the surface once. Reardon, a strong swimmer, clutched at White and began to aid him to swim ashore.

Three other young men, members of the same party, sat in the motor launch 25 yards away, helpless to aid as Wolf went down and the others struggled.

BODY NOT FOUND

And a second fishing party, the motor of their boat crippled temporarily, also witnessed the spectacle.

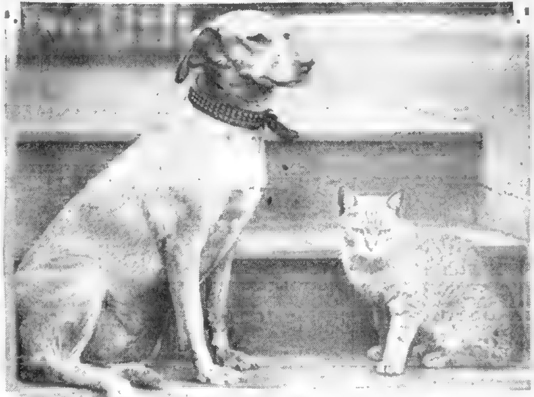
John De Abellar, a summer resident on Peddock's Island rushed out into the water, wading to where Reardon was feebly assisting White to shore, and brought both men to safety.

Reardon was treated at the Sturgis Hospital, and later discharged. White, who first gave his name to police as Mahoney, for fear that his parents would worry over the accident, was held at the hospital, and late last night it was stated he would be transferred to the City Hospital.

John Connolly, 24, of 413 Fourth st., South Boston, and his brother, Joseph, 26, with Joseph Santos of Boston ave., Medford, all members of the fishing party, headed for the spot where Wolf had gone down.

John Connolly went over the side, fully clad and made several efforts to bring up the body, without avail. Later, coast guardsmen at the Point Allerton station were notified, and boats with grappling irons were sent to the scene.

Cats-Dogs in Peace Pact



PALS. YOU TELL 'EM. The dog is "Bum," mascot of Fireboat 31. His pal is "Ukey." Ukey is a child of "Battleaxe Mike," tough cat of the North Side. "Ukey's" mother died shortly after its birth and since then "Bum" has been a mother to "Ukey."

POSING ESPECIALLY for this story is "Battleaxe Mike." Look at those piercing eyes. The firemen tell you out loud that there is none tougher in Boston. (Staff photo.)

The last named snickered up his fur sleeve today at the story that South End cats are tough and that Beacon Hill cats are tougher.

"Battleaxe Mike" has been the bob-tailed alley champ of the North End for lo, these many years, and at Station 31 of the fire department, they do say as how he's as tough he chews hose nozzles to keep his teeth in shape.

THE ROYALL MANSION, MEDFORD

THIS OLD-TIME MANSION [illegible] with its interesting slave quarters and fenced-in grounds on Main st., Medford, was originally part of 600 acres granted to Gov. John Winthrop, known as Ten Hills Farm.

When Gov. Winthrop [illegible] in 1649 the farm became the property of his son, whose heirs sold it to Mrs. Elizabeth Lidgett, who in turn sold it [illegible] Col. Charles Lidgett [illegible] a friend of Sir Edmund Andros [illegible] to England when Andros [illegible] as governor of New England fell.

The estate [illegible] Medford passed to [illegible] whose wife was [illegible] a sister of Col. Lidgett [illegible] lived on the farm after [illegible] as lieutenant-governor of New Hampshire and upon his death the estate was sold to Col. Isaac Royall, who resided there until his death in 1739, when his son, Col. Isaac Royall, came into possession.

FLED TO ENGLAND

The second Colonel was a Tory [illegible] occupancy terminated [illegible] upon the opening of the Revolution, when he fled to England. The estate was confiscated and held by the government until purchased by Robert Fletcher in 1806. Gradually it has grown smaller, having been sold in small parcels. The homestead and the slave quarters with the surrounding lawns are all that now remain.

The date of construction of the mansion is unknown, but it was probably built as a six-room domicile during Governor Winthrop's time and occupied by his tenant. Lieutenant-Governor Usher must have added to the structure, for his wealth and standing in the colony would warrant a larger house.

When the Royalls took possession [illegible] the house was [illegible]

Gen. [illegible] of New Hampshire [illegible] grounds until Boston was evacuated. Other generals used the old dwelling, too, during the Revolution, even George Washington himself, it is said. Dress parade on the extensive lawn was a familiar sight in 1775.

Isaac Royall was the only Tory in Medford in 1776 as far as is known. He was fond of the land of his birth, however, for he remembered in his will this young nation. Through his beneficence, the first professorship in law at Harvard College was founded, and he also gave 2000 acres of land in Granby to the University.

When Harvard Hall was burnt in 1764 and its library of the colonies destroyed he gave generously to offset the loss. He was a good deputy to the General Court, every year returning his salary to the town. To Charlestown he donated 100 pounds for a parsonage and 80 pounds for a school. He could not, however, oppose England, although deeply interested in the Colonies.

TERCENTENARY FEATURE

The Royall Mansion has been the picturesque background for a recent tercentenary feature, when the calvacade from the Arbella at Salem stopped in Medford, on its way with the charter of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to Boston.

Medford is reached from Sullivan terminal, as the electrics stop en route to Bedford sq. The Mansion is open daily to visitors and the interior has been restored to its original setting as far as possible.

SEEK PAYMENT FOR CLOTHING LOST AT FIRE

Dozen Ask Mayor for Aid After Fighting the Charlestown Lumber Yard Fire

A delegation of 11 young men called on Mayor Curley today seeking reimbursement for clothing which they claimed was ruined while they were volunteer firemen at the Charlestown conflagration on July 4.

The claim of one other who could not appear in person was also lodged with the mayor. They joined the firemen in battling the flames for from 14 to 26 hours, they said, after a fire captain had shouted to them:

"Grab a line, boys!"

They grabbed lines with disastrous results to shoes, suits, [illegible] and hats.

Mayor Curley informed them that under the city statutes he had no means of reimbursing them but that he would confer with the city law department and find out whether it would be ethical for him to introduce an order in the City Council calling for funds for that use.

TO ASK FOR $360

He inquired whether they thought $30 apiece would be a fair price and they agreed it would be so the order, if introduced, will be for $360.

Then, so that their visit might not be unfruitful, he presented each with an autographed copy of the Tercentenary celebration program.

The applicants for the wherewithal to purchase new "duds" were Edward Kenniston, 23, of Dorchester, and the following, all of Charlestown: Edward Collins, 18, Andrew Sheehan, 18; and John Haney, 18, all of Lexington st.; Austin Winston, 17, of Corey st.; William Pierace, 17, of Cedar st.; John Cass, 18, of Sprague st.; Joseph Doherty, 20, of Stone st.; James Harrington, 17, of Moulton st.; William Mason, 19, of Monument st.; Albert Doherty, 26, of Prospect st. and Harry Fleming, 18, of High st.

Women's Feet Not So Dainty Now

Nor does the dainty miss with the 4-B foot reign as mistress of her sex—she has given way to the lady with feet a size larger.

This was the announcement of shoes experts today when they gathered at Hotel Statler for the 14th annual Boston Shoe Fair. The heels of ladies' shoes will elevate a quarter of an inch this year. More than 6000 more are expected to take part in a long program mapped out for the three days.

The first "business" of the day brought the harbor outing this afternoon and the golf tournament at Woodland Golf Club, Auburndale.

Good looking . . . agreeable

. . . but 'B.O.' (Body Odor) spoiled the good impression

EVEN AT a summer hotel where men were scarce, he couldn't make a hit with girls: They liked his looks. They would have liked him, too, if he hadn't had one fault they couldn't excuse.

Of course he didn't suspect the real reason. And nobody told him. People hate to hint at body odor even by its polite name—"B.O." . . . Later he found out the truth and a simple way to be safe. He's having a lot more fun now. He's one of the "crowd"—invited everywhere since he learned the easy way to keep perspiration odorless.

Hotter weather—take no chances

Don't trifle with "B.O." It's so easy for anyone to offend and not know it—especially these hot days when we perspire more freely. We quickly become used to an ever-present odor—don't notice it in ourselves—never dream it is annoying others. But it is!

Wash and bathe with Lifebuoy—then you're safe. Enjoy its cooling, refreshing, penetrating lather, so abundant even in hardest water. Heat and stickiness quickly vanish—every trace of "B.O." goes, too. For Lifebuoy's rich, creamy lather is gently antiseptic. It purifies pores. Its pleasant, extra-clean scent—that quickly rinses away—tells you why.

Raquel Decides Beauty Is More Powerful Than Money in the World

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Raquel's gowns arouse the admiration of Mrs. Dexter, a very wealthy woman, who confides in Raquel that she is going to Paris to divorce her husband. Weeping, she tells Raquel that Dexter has deserted her for a beautiful siren. Her one hope is that she can make herself attractive in Courbet gowns and win back her husband's love.

Chapter 34

"What is wrong with women, anyway?" Raquel asked herself that night after she had returned the coral earrings to their cache in the cheap leather coin-purse and, with troubled mind, disposed herself for sleep.

"This Mrs. Dexter, for example. Torturing herself because she can't have what she has virtually thrown away. I'll bet she wears flannel nightgowns and does her hair in a braid."

She wanted to whip up compassion for the woman who suffered so poignantly. To put ardor, determination into the business of making Mrs. Dexter ready for what was to be a campaign of reclamation. She could find no heart in the task.

"Didn't she know he was not her property, body and soul, forever, just because she got him once? She should have. She must have seen often enough what happens to her kind. There isn't a man, not one, who can't be coaxed away if he's left to run loose or if he's fed on nothing but cold potatoes or molasses or chili peppers at home. Nothing will hold them, once they're fed up."

Love? Love is beauty. Love thrives on beauty. Starve it and love dies. As Dexter's love for his wife was dead.

Money Can Buy
Beauty More Powerful

Money? Money can buy, but it cannot guarantee more than a temporary ownership at best. It is the irony of fate that to those who sell themselves basely the very prizes for which they entered into shameful bargain lose all value once the prizes are possessed. Elsworth Bosart. He was one who sold, and now strove to repudiate his bargain.

But beauty. Beauty was different. Beauty was omnipotent.

"Beauty took Bill Johnson away from Lily," Raquel whispered to herself. "Beauty made Jack Farrell lend me the money so I could get out of Hermosa. That stupid conductor—do you think he would have let me ride to Phoenix without paying if I had been ugly, or even just plain? And the paradise hat! I'd still be wearing the shabby old felt. I'd be in New York, married to Jack Farrell—bound for life. Instead of on this ship, free, going to Paris. Bosart, Bertie Adams, Alphonse, flowers, these downy blankets, that closet full of wonderful clothes, music. All servants of beauty."

Yes. There could be no doubt of it. Beauty ruled the world.

Well then, beauty might still be made to rule Mrs. Dexter's husband. He had it, in the woman like a beautiful serpent the woman Mrs. Dexter had told her about. But he would be ready for a new a different kind of beauty. He was like Alphonse. A humming bird, seeking fresh flowers.

"She can probably get him back," Raquel said aloud. "Not that she deserves to. She deserved exactly what she has. As I would deserve what I'd get if I had stayed on in the desert and let that great devil of a Pancho sell me to Bill Johnson."

She felt a slight twinge of conscience over her bold arraignment of Pancho. Not because he was her father, and she had blasphemed against him; rather because she knew that in the beginning she herself conceived the idea of selling herself to the man who was in a position to make the highest bid she might expect.

Alphonse had contracted to metamorphose Mrs. Dexter from a light that hides under a bushel into a star shining in a high heaven, dimming the radiance of the other stars around it. He would make the most of her cameo-like features, create new reasons why she should be conspicuous in a city consecrated to fashion, frivolity and the loveliness of women.

Raquel Offended
Alphonse Suspicious

"It will be amusing to see what happens," Raquel said to Alphonse the next morning. "I'd like to see Mr. Dexter's face when he sees what you've done with his wife. I wonder what he's like. Will I meet him?"

Alphonse shook his head. His wise face crinkled into a smile.

"I think not, ma petite," he said. "I fear if it is arranged that you meet this so silly man, our campaign will be doomed to failure. And Madame Dexter will be convinced another serpent has entered her Adamless Eden."

Raquel frowned. Did Alphonse think she was so light of mind? That she would spoil his plans, fail him? For the attentions of a man, however flattering they might be? She was offended.

"Now, now," Alphonse soothed. "I meant no offense. It is that you cannot help being as you are. To one who is attuned to beauty, especially to exoticism, you are as a goblet of rare wine. Sparkling wine, ruby red, from the cellar of an epicure."

"To you, perhaps." Raquel was mollified by the tribute.

"To all men." Alphonse would brook no exception to his judgment. "Besides, I know Dexter. He is a connoisseur of Beauty. Or rather, he was. I am sorry for his wife, for Madame Dexter. Yet, I cannot blame her husband."

"Nor can I," said Raquel.

Alphonse gave her a long look. There was something like regret in his eyes. Understanding and regret.

"No. You wouldn't," he said. "You could never be a Madame Bosart. You are too—sensible."

Raquel was sure he meant to say "too hard," and had caught himself in time.

After Raquel had said her adieus to Alphonse that evening—it was nearly midnight—she passed a woman in the corridor outside the suite. The woman eyed her boldly, almost belligerently, as they passed.

"She looks as if she'd like to bite me," Raquel thought. "There, she's turned and is coming back. She's upset about something."

The suite was in darkness. That was strange. A light was always left burning, the amber one, on the table. Greta must have forgotten and turned it out.

"Raquel." A voice swished through the darkness. "That you?"

It was Greta. Greta was in this room.

"Yes, of course. Turn on the light."

"No, no. Don't touch it. Did you notice a woman in the corridor when you came in?"

"Why, yes——"

A low moan from Greta. "Keep quiet, for the love of Pete. I got a friend in here with me. We're hiding from the woman out there."

Hides From Wife
Greta in a Mixup

"But Greta—"

"I know, Raquel. You think I'm terrible. You think I'm wicked. Oh, Cousin Raquel, what will Uncle Alphonse say?" smothered sobs in the darkness.

"Don't cry, I'll—" A man's voice, muffled, from somewhere in the room.

"You'll—oh, you. It's all your fault. How did I know when you took me on the top deck and kissed me, that you had a jealous wife watching every move you make? And now we've had to hide in here. What will people say? You're a terrible man, getting a young girl into trouble like this. Oh-oh-oh! And Uncle Al promised I could have my own car if I behaved. I won't go back to the convent, Raquel. I won't. O-o-o-oh."

The Marry-Go-Round

-By HELEN ROWLAND-

"Going Dutch"

One of the most acute and poignant problems bothering lots of girls today, is the etiquette of the Dutch Treat.

This, of course, is no problem to the gold-digger and the mollusc, who are out for Big Game and fodder—free sustenance, orchids, parties and graft. Nor does it particularly worry the "home-girl," who can "feed the brute" at her own fireside and do her bit with hospitality and home-cooking.

But to the business girl with a big pay-envelope and a struggling young Boy Friend, it is both a serious and delicate matter. There is something gallant about the modern girl of the finer type which makes her squeamish about accepting sacrifices and inspires her to play FAIR.

In the old days, when a box of bon bons and a stroll in the moonlight constituted a Large Evening, and there were no taximeters ticking away a man's lunch-money for the week, it was different. But, now, with a pair of theater tickets averaging the price of a wedding ring, the high cost of loving is more than most young men can bear.

Yet, men are funny that way. To a girl, "going Dutch" may be a positive pleasure; but to a man it is always painful. One kind of man would let a girl sit at home, playing solitaire forever, before he would permit her to pay her own dinner-check. Another kind may TRY to be "modern"; but, inside, he curls up and shrivels at the sight of a woman counting out her taxi-fare.

Somehow, a man never seems to think more of a woman for paying her own way. It doesn't make him grateful—it makes him self-conscious and suspicious. Instead of feeling that she is being fine and fair and square, he merely begins to wonder if she has ulterior designs on him, and is trying to bait him. It lowers her market-value in his eyes.

What's in Fashion?

How to Tell Whether a Thing's a Fashion or Not

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, July 7—There are countless styles in existence. And more new styles being created every day. Which of them are fashions and which are not? There is one test, and one sure answer. It's this:

And those styles which the majority of people don't want—don't wear—don't use—are not fashions. Regardless of who created these unwanted styles.

A thing adopted by just a few people [illegible] It [illegible] a fad doomed to a speedy death—or it may be a style which later may be adopted by a great many people and therefore become a fashion. But it's not a real fashion until it is adopted by a considerable number of people.

Women's Fashions

Notice what women are wearing when they meet at luncheon. You'll see many women are wearing blue. That helps prove that blue is a fashion.

See their shoes. If more women are wearing one-strap shoes than sandals, then one-strap shoes are more in fashion than sandals.

Men's Fashions

Look at the men at a club lunch or at any gathering of well dressed men. Notice their neckties. Count them. And the neckties the greatest number of men wear there are the neckties of first fashion importance for these men.

Look at their coat lapels. And if more of them are peaked rather than notched—as they're likely to be—that's the coat lapel fashion.

Home Fashions

Go into a lot of homes and look around the rooms. And notice the furniture is getting a little smaller. That's because rooms are getting a little smaller.

And because rooms are getting smaller, and furniture is smaller, that makes furniture that is smaller in scale a fashion. Because it's in a lot of homes. And is being preferred by a lot of people.

And notice the bread on the table. Whether it's in the home or in a restaurant—you'll see more whole wheat bread around than you did a few years ago. Of course you'll see white bread, too. And lots of it. And rolls. And lots of them. Whatever you see the most of, that's most in fashion.

Fashions in Everything

Watch the automobiles that go by or ask the people who sell automobiles what types of cars are in fashion. They'll tell you because they know what people want. What kinds of cars are most favored. Which are increasing in popularity. And which are less popular now than a few years ago. For, of course, there are fashions in automobiles.

And so it is with almost everything you use or wear. There are fashions in kitchen utensils, home furnishings, furniture, foods, athletics, gifts, amusements to mention only a few things.

And so what people want and buy and use and wear and have around them all these are in fashion. And the things they've discarded and turned their thumbs down on and no longer want are out of fashion.

In Step with Fashion

And she or he who is in step with fashion today is in step with modern life—because to be in step with fashion is to be in this big parade that's going places.

It doesn't necessarily mean all dressed up and no place to go. It's all dressed up and plenty of places to go. And going!

We're going to tell you what's in fashion as we see fashions. And about the fashions that interest you.

We're going to get out material and facts for these daily fashion features [illegible] the [illegible] of a great many fashion-knowing eyes.

These eyes are in Paris, Palm Beach, New York, Boston, and all over America wherever the fashion-knowing women and men are. They'll see who wears what—what homes wear what—and they'll report to us and we'll report to [illegible] —what's in Fashion.

These fashion-seeing eyes of our fashion organization, trained in looking for fashions, are going to look at fashions for the readers of this newspaper and supply the facts that are the bases for these articles. And the fashions they see, we are going to analyze and tell you about.

Tomorrow—Skirt Lengths.

Because of Jealousy

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We have been married six months now and oh, things are so wrong, we quarrel terribly. I believe it is all on account of jealousy. When my husband and I go out together, he doesn't seem to notice me at all he just has a good time with the others and it hurts me so. I love him so much that I'm jealous and [illegible] with are all older than we are—my husband seems to get a big kick out of going round with older people.

LONESOME BRIDE

Dear Lonesome Bride: The time has come, my dear Lonesome Bride, for you take a brace. Try not to be so jealous, and if you can't help it, at least learn to conceal your feelings. People are unconsciously cruel, sometimes, and doubtless these older people may enjoy making you jealous. Don't watch your husband when you are with other people; try and interest yourself in some agreeable person who is there, and above all, don't be melancholy around the house. Try to be lively and amusing, don't forget—

"Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep and you weep alone."

Seek Business Girl

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Having had a happy married life for over ten years, I feel now since the passing away of my wife very lonesome. Since my days of courtship social fashions have changed a great deal and I feel out of steps with the present unmarried set. I am wondering whether there are any decent minded, sensible women left, who can be real companions, and even can take a drink gracefully, enjoy outdoor life, etc., without going to extremes in everything. If you believe so can you tell me where to find them?

WIDOWER.

Dear S[illegible] [illegible] of decent, self-respecting mature women, who can be good pals and not prudish, and still not go the limit but it is hard to know where to find them. Don't get discouraged. You will usually find this type of woman among the independent, self-supporting business girls who have had to take life as its comes, and know the value of good times, but also the necessity for self-restraint. Try and meet some of this type.

Let Him Tell It

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am very much in love with a boy two years my senior. I am 13 years old. When I tell him I love him he does not seem to believe me. He tells friends of mine he likes me, but he does not seem to take any interest in me. I do not go out with him very often, although I have asked him many times to go. But he refuses. I can't think of leaving him. I love him so.

ANXIOUS.

Dear Anxious: I have it on very good (male) authority that a man never really belives that a woman loves him, no matter how much she says so. (Perhaps they're always conscious of the fact that there's no reason why she should.) So stop telling him how much you love him and let him tell you how much he [illegible] for a change.

Better Wait Awhile

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am 17 and I am going with a young man of 23. We are very much in love with each other, but my mother is very much against our going together. My mother has a very slight reason for not liking my boy-friend, and until she found this out, she had the very highest respect for him and approved of my going with him. He and I are planning to be married, for we have found out that we are too much in love to leave each other. The question is, can we be [illegible] ages, without the consent of [illegible] parents, and still be in accordance with the law? I shall watch your column as I have every other night and I thank you in advance for your advice.

WORRIED.

Dear Worried: Age limits for marrying without parental consent vary in different states, but I would not advise you to marry against your mother's wishes, unless you are quite sure her objection is not justified. You are both rather young to take on the responsibilities of marriage, and can lose nothing by waiting a year or two.

Some Points on Etiquette

—By MRS. BEECKMAN—

Succession of Family Names

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1 Here is my problem. It concerns the naming of a first son. Because of the age and health of my husband's father, he is desirous of naming his first son for him—and the second son for himself. Say the grandfather's name is John Paul Jones. Would it be correct to call the grandchild John Paul Jones, second—as the father's name is Henry Thomas Jones?

2. Also, would it then be correct to call the second son Henry Thomas Jones, Jr.?

I have received many conflicting answers to this question, and shall be very thankful, indeed, for your advice.

D. M. A.

1. Yes.
2. Yes.

Accepting Prizes

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN.

1—Is it good form ot accept a bridge prize when you are also presented with a gift as honor guest? Or should it be given to the person holding next highest score?

2—Would it be all right to write the hostess a letter of thanks for her party and gift, even though you had thanked her personally the evening the party?

1—When you win the first prize at bridge, it is good form (and certainly "reasonable") to keep the prize. And this is true even if there also is a guest prize. Neither one has anything to do, fundamentally, with the other.

2—Not only is this all right, but it is the only polite thing to do and it requires a great deal of planning and generosity. Therefore, naturally, it should receive the deepest and most articulate expression of appreciation and thanks.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers)

Parents, Never Young, Kill Joy in Home

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

It's a strange thing that this world should always contain a certain number of parents who were never young.

Beatrice Fairfax

You find that absurd? But what else is one to think of fathers and mothers who seem to understand nothing of the spirit of youth and who deny their children all natural recreation, imprisoning them in the miserable and dreary things that they have made of home.

Perhaps they have taken it for granted that such unnatural men and women live only in old-fashioned novels. You may have supposed that all youth is untrammelled nowadays, and that in so free an age as ours the last thing we need worry about is excessive parental severity.

But I assure you that these joy-killing parents do exist. Not a week passes that I do not receive anguished letters from their unhappy children.

"Our dad is different from all people that ever lived," an innocent 16-year-old girl wrote me the other day. "He thinks all amusements are wrong and foolish. We can't even go to a show, except by chance. My oldest sister eloped at the age of 20. We want to be good, but can't we enjoy life a little? How can we make Dad understand?"

The trouble is that Dads of that order do not understand until an over-repressed child breaks loose, and in some way that the parent finds highly distasteful. In most [illegible] his correspondent. What father admits it? Can it be his own fault when the boys run away from home before they have finished school and are never heard of again? Prove it to him if you can.

It goes without saying, I hope, that I am not pleading for [illegible] girls follow their own most reckless impulses, restrained by no wise parental authority.

On the contrary, I believe that parents can scarcely supervise too carefully the occupations and amusements of their young sons and daughters.

All I am suggesting is that young creatures cannot grow and develop, healthfully, deprived of every opportunity for play. Parents have their choice. They can permit natural legitimate recreation, or they can face the explosion that sooner or later is bound to come.

Perhaps the most exasperating feature of the parental tyranny we are speaking of is that it is so often carried on in the name of religion.

It is the sort of thing of which an 18-year-old girl who signs herself "Silent Reader" is, I should say, an almost too uncomplaining victim.

"I am employed all the week," she writes, "and Sunday is my only day at home. My parents go to church very often and my mother thinks I am opposed to religion because I don't go every time they do. She is so sad and gloomy all the time. I have been to only two dances in my life. If I go to a show mother will hardly speak to me for days. I've never had any fun in life at all. Shouldn't Christianity begin at home?"

Even if the writer of this letter doesn't develop melancholia, she is at least being entirely unfitted for life through having no association with other young people and no playtime. But who is going to explain to that harsh church-going mother than in the name of Christianity she is committing something that might well be called a crime? And who is going to arouse in that long-suffering daughter the spirit of healthy independence that 18 years of submission to a parental steam roller have apparently so thoroughly crushed in her?

Must we be tolerant of such parents on the ground that the flower [illegible] gated by misfortunes we know nothing [illegible] that they have stupidly, almost brutally, forgotten the lovely [illegible] playtime of their own lives? Did dancing and moonlight and young laughter, did love itself, make no impression on their stony hearts, so that in denying joy to their children they [illegible] what they [illegible]

How to Keep Well

—By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND—

Outlook for Epileptic More Hopeful

Referring to the various troubles that "man is heir to," the doctors speak of "functional" and "organic" diseases. An organic disease affects the structure of a particular organ, while a [illegible] disease affects the action of an organ rather than its substance.

Dr. Copeland

Among the functional diseases is epilepsy. Between attacks the vic[tim] [illegible] mal in appearance, in action and in mental activity as any of his associates.

Epilepsy has been described as the "falling disease." The victim falls as if shot. The face is very pale and the eyes turn upward. The head is drawn to one side or backward. The hands are clenched with the thumb doubled under the f[ingers]. [illegible]

Following [illegible] are convulsive movements of the body, [illegible] twitch, the eyes roll and there is frothing of the mouth. Unless [illegible] [illegible] stupor.

On the other hand the patient's trouble may be so slight as to escape notice. [illegible] simply a suspension of the particular act in which he is engaged at the time. He may hardly realize that something untoward has occurred.

Epilepsy is one of the most discouraging of the nervous diseases to treat. But at the present time, when special attention is being given to diet, occupation and the improvement of nutrition and the elimination of the wastes of the body, the outlook is more hopeful.

There are many factors to be studied. Uncorrected eyestrain, nasal trouble and other forms of irritation seem to have a bearing on the attacks. Undoubtedly disturbances of the intestinal tract is productive of much trouble.

Every person who has the symptoms of epilepsy should be placed under the care of an expert.

The Beauty Box

—By HELEN FOLLETT—

Eyes are self-sufficient. They look after themselves pretty well. Whenever the lid passes over the eyeball, it distributes oil over the cornea surface, keeping it from drying out, oiling the eyelids. When danger threatens, the lids close quickly. If a foreign particle lodges in the eye, along comes a stream of salty water from the tear duct to wash it away. The mechanism with which the eye attends to its needs is delicate and marvelous.

The mottled, "pebbly" complexion is benefited by face packs made by mixing rich milk with almond meal. The pack should stay on for 10 or 15 minutes, then towels wrung out of warm water should be laid on. The juice of half a lemon taken morning has a whitening effect upon a skin surface that is sallow and poor of texture.

LEADERS HEAVY IN NEW YORK DEALINGS

New York, July 7—Leading issues displayed pronounced heaviness on the New York Stock Exchange today. The market faced its first severe test of stability when trading was resumed after the triple holiday, and did not [illegible] act at all nicely [illegible].

Spotty rallies were staged at intervals, but most of the day the market was setting new lows or else hovering near the old ones.

NEW LOWS SET

A score or more of [illegible] speculative favorites were [illegible] into new low ground for the year, some breaking [illegible] the low levels of [illegible] November. Hurried efforts at support were made by constructive forces and centered in the recognized pivotal leaders, which held above their previous low of last month although showing sizeable setbacks.

In the main, however, despite the drying up [illegible] but feeble [illegible] dence, and stocks pursued a more or less uninterrupted course on the downside.

U. S. Steel cracked to 153 [illegible], where it showed a loss of 4⅛ points from its previous close. Other standard bearers suffered a like fate, with American Can [illegible] General Electric down [illegible] Radio down [illegible] Westinghouse down [illegible].

Acute [illegible] chemical [illegible] lumping 6⅞ points to a new low at 109½. Du Pont sold off 2½ points to register a new low at 97½. Allied Chemical dipped 8 to 247 and Union Carbide showed a loss of 3⅛ points at 65.

Utility shares [illegible] resistance [illegible] gave way abruptly and sharp declines were the rule in this section. Among the numerous issues to turn lower were American Telephone down 3 at 204. American and Foreign Power warrants down 2⅛ at [illegible] Waterworks down 3 at 80. Electric Power down 3⅛ at 64 [illegible] North American [illegible] at 67.

Selling [illegible] driving down North American more than 6 points to a new low for the year. Persistent selling of American Telephone [illegible] ment.

CURB PRICES EASE

[illegible] was in evidence at the opening, depressing prices moderately from last Thursday's close, but [illegible] failed to bring out much stock and trading fell into a rut.

Losses were generally small. Electric Bond & Share was in fair supply and [illegible] but the [illegible] were inactive and [illegible] lower.

A break of about 20 points in Aluminum of America featured the industrials, which were rather irregular. Pepperell Manufacturing and Deere worked higher, while A. O. Smith rallied nearly a dozen points. Hazeltine, Technicolor, Newmont Mining, American Cyanamid B and Cuneo Press eased.

Cities Service was heavy, breaking below 26 [illegible]. There was [illegible] in the other oils [illegible] Kansas Pipe Line [illegible] some profit taking.

HARVARD VIEW IS CHEERFUL

Summing up a discussion of the financial situation the Harvard Economic Society in its current weekly letter says:

"It seems clear that important investment buying has been taking place at recent levels, but it may be premature to conclude that a period of stabilization in stock prices has been reached. It may be pointed out, however, that great ease continues in the money market and that manufacturing activity, when due allowance is made for seasonal changes, has held its own since early spring.

"Doubtless political uncertainty contributed to the June decline in stocks, but the chief influences responsible were the weakness in commodity prices and the failure of business to show substantial improvement in the past few months. These latter conditions may have had their maximum effect, however, and we do not believe that they will persist much longer."

Wheat Prices in Chicago Are Lower

Chicago, July 7—With sellers in a majority, and demand slight in comparison, wheat prices underwent a decided setback today. Favorable weather for spring wheat growth in Canada and the United States, together with auspicious harvest conditions for domestic winter wheat, tended to pull support from under the market.

Opening [illegible] off, wheat afterward showed additional downturns. Corn, oats and provisions were likewise easier, with corn starting [illegible] down, and subsequently declining more.

Analyzing recent depression in relation to the business [illegible] Dr. George W. Edwards, economist for Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., will say in the forthcoming July issue of the Stone & Webster Journal that in the past 10 years general business [illegible] upward for two years and then downward for one year.

"Thus after the severe reaction in 1921," he says, "there was a rise in 1922 and 1923, with a reaction in 1924, and an upward trend in 1925 and 1926, with a decline in 1927, and then came the rapid rise in 1928 and 1929. It should be noted that business has been declining ever since last August and so we really have been in a period of recession for almost a year."

"The public mind remembers keenly the excesses of the security markets in 1929," he says, "but forgets in these days of pessimism that business and finance ever since the crisis of 1920 have been pursuing policies which have placed the underlying economic foundation of the nation on a sound basis."

While production in steel and motor vehicles, new building and engineering projects and car loadings continue to reflect declines, Dr. Edwards finds that business [illegible] business was [illegible] 7 per cent below normal.

"Recovery from the stage of recession," he says, "depends in a large measure upon adjustment between production and consumption. Contrary to the popular belief the current statistics in consumption indicate a satisfactory level. Thus department store sales are approximately the same as those of a year ago and chain store sales in May were larger than in April notwithstanding the amount of Easter business in that month. A continuation of the maintenance of consumption and the decline in production should result in hastening the period of stabilization which precedes the upward trend in business.

Improved Methods Aid Production Economies

By IRVING FISHER
Professor of Economics, Yale University

Irving Fisher

[illegible] the board of the American Rolling Mill Co. [illegible]

[illegible] the new [illegible] brought out new uses for steel. The industry has called in specialists in metallurgy, in advertising and in marketing.

With its immense progress in productive technique have come great economies, improved quality [illegible] of marketing.

In spite of the lower prices for steel products the program of the steel manufacturers is to increase total plant capacity within a year by 4,000,000 gross tons of ingots.

[illegible] year, is exceeded only slightly by the average production of 20,[illegible] tons for the five years from 1925 to 1929 inclusive.

CAPACITY IS HIGHEST

On the rating of 1925, for example, steel production in June this year would be 85 per cent of capacity; on rated capacity for 1928, it would be 82 per cent.

There have been enlargements this year and extensions and improvements are going on. The United States Steel Corporation is [illegible] and three at McKeesport, Pa.

[illegible] Steel is expanding six open-hearth furnaces at two of its plants. With [illegible] extensions the capacity for [illegible] production per year will be [illegible] increased for 1931. Along with this program of expansion the [illegible] companies are adding to [illegible] reserves.

[illegible] leading companies have recently acquired several large iron ore companies in the Great Lakes [illegible] looking ahead for supply of needs from 25 to 30 years hence.

FAITH IN FUTURE

Such plans and developments are [illegible] in the face of slackening seasonal activity and with [illegible] lower for iron and [illegible] over the world. News dispatches state that the European [illegible] is passing through a [illegible] in its attempt to [illegible] prices by curtailing production and apportioning markets in various countries.

The cartel has never before confronted a general business depression [illegible] English and Westphalian [illegible] are busy cutting prices [illegible]. The American steel [illegible] have cut prices, but they [illegible] far maintained wage rates. They are seeking to find new economies and to apply better methods.

The example is encouraging. With this great basic industry thus manifesting its faith in the business future, all business leaders may well [illegible]

BOND OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

Bond prices on the New York Stock Exchange presented a more favorable outlook last week, with the [illegible]-bond index rising toward the week's close to counteract the [illegible] at the week's opening, thereby [illegible] no loss over the week. Five of the six groups made slight [illegible].

The recent decline that began on June 11 continued to July 1, when the index of 100.5 showed a drop of 0.59 per cent from the index of 101.1 on June 10. Bond prices suffered a similar decline from March 21, the 1930 high, of 101.6 to April 30, taking a drop of 0.89 per cent.

The average weekly rate of decline in the recent break was 0.20 [illegible] per week for a period of three weeks, as compared with a rate of 0.15 per cent per week for a period of six weeks in the preceding decline.

[illegible] average daily value traded [illegible] the New York Stock [illegible] dropped by 15.3 per cent [illegible] to $9,900,000, with all of the six groups showing declines and utilities at their 1930 low. Of the 70 bonds in the Irving Fisher selection 47 per cent rose in price [illegible] as compared with the [illegible] week's [illegible], when 23 [illegible] were off and 31 per cent showed no change.

Second grade rails were the only [illegible] to make a sharp recovery [illegible] last week's close. [illegible] at 102.2 on July 3, has [illegible] per cent since June [illegible] since the 1930 [illegible] March 24, and is but [illegible] per cent above the extreme [illegible] November 15, 1929.

HEARST PREFERRED STOCK OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC TODAY

NEW ERA IS INAUGURATED BY FINANCING POLICY

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

New York, July 7—The significant events of finance are frequently undramatic. The changes that alter the way that plain men and women live come quietly and unobtrusively. For example, since the war there has been a radical change in the character of ownership in the United States.

Title to corporate [illegible] tended to pas[illegible] an oligarchy of [illegible] and to be diff[illegible] the multitudes [illegible] quiet grad[illegible] sagacious [illegible] University, de[illegible] the present [illegible] in the United St[illegible]

The broader [illegible] offering today [illegible] at $25 a share [illegible] have been [illegible] and employes [illegible] dated Pub[illegible] company emb[illegible] successful newspapers in the Hearst chain, the lucrative American Weekly [illegible] the American Newsprint [illegible] a step towa[illegible] the great [illegible] hitherto own[illegible] Randolph Hear[illegible] socio[illegible] person[illegible] Mr. Hearst [illegible] porative [illegible] new community of [illegible]

Applies New Principle

Far more [illegible] than the [illegible] cur lies with [illegible] strong ban[illegible] dorsement placed by Mr. Hearst on the newer tendencies of finance. Emulating the great public utilities which have successfully engaged in customer ownership, Mr. Hearst has applied the principle to a great coalition of industrial enterprises, if newspapers may be considered industrials. Though technically industrials, newspapers are of necessity impregnated with a public interest and touch the lives of the people far more intimately than so-called public utilities and, in my opinion, more significantly and intimately than many of the institutions of government [illegible] over, the [illegible] monopolistic p[illegible] tions because there is no choice, the public in its newspaper preferences exercises freedom of the will. Newspaper circulations are founded on the habits and voluntary preferences of the public. In most cities the public can choose between at least two newspapers, and in the larger [illegible] choice. In addition to stressing the customer ownership side, Mr. Hearst has invited his business executives, editors, special writers, reporters, copy readers and the whole miscellany of 20,000 persons directly dependent on the Hearst activities for a livelihood, to subscribe on the easy payment plan over 24 months.

The National City Co. offices in Boston are located at 30 Congress st. The Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser publication offices are located at 5 Winthrop sq.

[illegible] these properties which represent the cream of the most important chain of newspapers in the world. With more than 42 years of publishing experience behind him, Mr. Hearst is unquestionably the foremost world figure in popular journalism. As a modest part of the [illegible]

A widespread feeling on the part of ambitious persons that they are working for themselves and sharing in the profits adds to the dignity of professional labor, and is of immense value to the organization not only in elevating morale but also in reducing the wastes of excessive labor turnover.

In the new setup, there is no danger of the great newspaper properties being subjected to the direction of a [illegible] Mr. Hearst, who has demonstrated these many years his amazing record as a profitmaker, will retain the voting stock, and continue to act as [illegible] The "A" preferred stock is non voting unless the dividend [illegible]

The preferred stock is cumulative up to 7 per cent, and non-cumulative on the additional 3 per cent. The book value of the properties going into the new corporation is $100,000,000.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

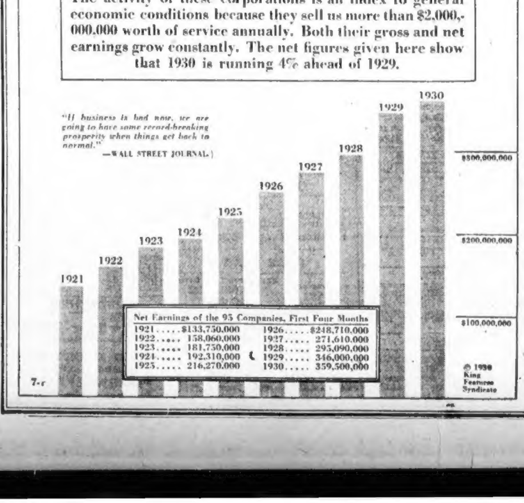
ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

Public Utilities are Breaking Records

The net earnings of 95 great public utility corporations during the first four months of 1930 are compared with the corresponding periods of the past nine years. They comprise virtually all the important companies in the United States which operate gas, electric light, heat, power, traction, and water services. Source: U. S. Bureau of the Census.

The activity of these corporations is an index to general economic conditions because they sell us more than $2,000,000,000 worth of service annually. Both their gross and net earnings grow constantly. The net figures given here show that 1930 is running 4% ahead of 1929.



Net Earnings of the 95 Companies, First Four Months
1921	$133,750,000	1926	$248,710,000
1922	158,060,000	1927	271,610,000
1923	181,730,000	1928	293,090,000
1924	192,310,000	1929	346,000,000

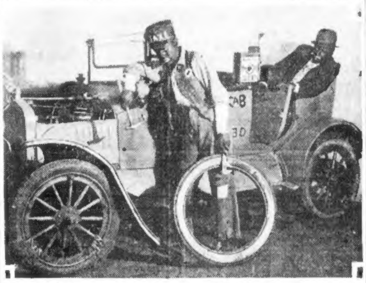
Two Tired Taxi Men



THESE TWO inimitable characters were first heard on the air in 1925. On January 12, 1926, they began their first regular broadcasts as "Sam 'n' Henry" for a Chicago newspaper, two years later closing with their 568th broadcast. Since the names of those characters was the property of the paper, the two comedians started out anew with the now well-known names, "Amos 'n' Andy."

CONCERNING RADIO

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

Very few people realize what an undertaking it is to broadcast a coast-to-coast program from the East. A local announcer is heard saying, "We will now transfer controls to New York where you will hear the Blank Orchestra." Click—and a jazzy New York orchestra fills the home with the latest music.

It all sounds very simple when sitting comfortably with the slippers on, but when the break is heard, or a bad hum, or some other extraneous noise that mars reception, one is inclined to think someone between the loud speaker and New York is not attending to business. Immediately the listener calls up the radio station and says that something is wrong and that it is time to wake up. As a matter of fact, long before this, dozens of expert engineers are after the trouble, have probably located it, and are more than half way through rectifying it.

Between Los Angeles and New York, there are approximately 25 relay or "booster" stations. These stations boost the volume of the program as it comes along so that it will be loud enough to be audible by the time it reaches Los Angeles. Every one of the "booster" stations is equipped with a good loud speaker where the program may be heard, and a "monitor man" whose duty it is to listen to the loud speaker and note any unnecessary noises. Upon hearing an extraneous noise other than the regular program, this monitor immediately checks with the "booster" station before him by a private telegraph wire. This second "monitor man" does the same thing, and so on, until the trouble is found.

Every time a program "goes bad," it does not mean that someone has fallen asleep. There are a thousand and one things that could happen to the wires between the coasts. A careless driver could run into a telegraph pole and knock down the wires carrying the program. A tree could fall on the wires and short circuit them. A storm could blow the wires down. A vacuum tube in one of the "booster" stations, or the transmitting station, could burn out. Each "booster" station has approximately five vacuum tubes operating in boosting a program, and a transmitting station has approximately 50 tubes. Add to this 25 tubes at the originating studio, and the result is 200 vacuum tubes necessary to put the program on the big hook-up.

Besides these difficulties a tube may become noisy and cause bad pops in the program. There may be a leaky transformer, a poor choke coil, or a dozen other things to spoil the program. Therefore it seems to us that when a few annoying cuts or pops are heard on one of the big nation-wide broadcasts, we should be as patient as possible and realize that many competent engineers are somewhere on the job before ever we could register our complaint.

At the Radio Dial

THOUGH THE General Motors Family Party is on for a half hour tonight over WEEI at 9:30 the program consists of but one number. It is a special program presenting Rimsky-Korsakoff's symphonic suite, "Scheherazade," in narrative style and will occupy the full time of the program. This composition which is based on "The Thousand and One Nights" will have against the background of music which pictures the fantastic life in old Bagdad, a "Story Teller" who will read a specially written narrative. This Oriental composition consists of separate unconnected episodes and is one of the most picturesque pieces of music ever written.

GENERAL MOTORS musical rival, the Stromberg Carlson presentation of the Rochester Civic Orchestra, will offer an abundance of gay classics over WBZA at 10 o'clock. Nicolai's jolly "Overture to the Merry Wives of Windsor," which is based on Shakespeare's play, will be the opening number. Brahm's melodie "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 5," Shubert's tuneful "Moment Musical," and Farandole" by Bizet are other selections on the program.

WHEN FRANK MOULAN was informed that he was to be the featured artist during the broadcast of Roxy and His Gang he upset all precedent and wrote a number especially for the occasion called "Featured," which will come through WBZA tonight at 7:45. Moulan, who is a trouper of some 35 seasons' experience, began his stage career when his occupation was considered a hazardous venture. He is primarily a comic artist, having played under such managers as Frohman, Klaw, Erlanger and Henry W. Savage. Moulan has in addition to this a repertoire of over a hundred opera pieces. The usual airiness of Roxy's Monday programs will comprise the rest of the hour.

A BATTLE OF MUSIC was the program common to all stations last night. It was music against Nature in the form of static. Every evening program was marred by the blasts, and, though we strongly suspect some good music was on the air, we have no proof. Will Rogers having departed for places unknown, we were free to turn to other stations without feeling as though we were missing something. The Studebaker Champions who have been sadly neglected on account of Will can now come into their own. Last night they played some nifty jazz music which recorded well between the blasts.

Band music, which reigns supreme on Sundays, was ably supported by Mayhew Lake and his band last night. This group seems to have awakened, for they no longer thrust much ill-fitting jazz into their repertoire, but concentrate on the classics. Lake showed much originality by playing "The Lost Chord," not in the hackneyed trumpet solo fashion, but as an orchestral number. The result was surprising; it was hardly recognizable played in this form. A clever arrangement of "Mighty Lak a Rose" was another agreeable feature of the program.

Tango music is a popular magnet for radio audiences, yet the scarcity of tango programs on the air is disappointing. The "El Tango Romantico," under the direction of the versatile Hugo Mariani, gives itself over exclusively to Spanish tangos over WBZA, Sundays, at 7 o'clock. Though this group practically has a monopoly on this brand of music they don't take advantage by slacking on quality but keep up a rapid fire of tempestuous tangos that tickle your toes and quicken your heart beat.

"Good Intentions," feature at the New B. F. Keith's, is a step toward that goal for which there shall be a minimum of slowing up, due to dialogue and a maximum of real motion picture art. "Good Intentions" is by no means perfect; but it marks a distinct advance. It also reveals that popular he-man of the movies, Edmund Lowe, as a graduate from his old U. S. Marine role, and given over to gangster stuff akin to his part recently in "Born Reckless." But the real laurels in the Keith feature this week fell to the "man behind," the director.

Marguerite Churchill

Such combinations in filmland have not been fortunate; directors have been in general but very poor creators of story material. But Mr. Howard is an excellent supervisor; so that by masterly direction he has turned out a swiftly flowing drama of lights and shadows, which keeps the appetite properly whetted and the interest stirred from first to last. Mr. Lowe, according to the tale, is in love with Marguerite Churchill, cast as a society girl. The arch villain decides to "go straight." But his gang has other plans. They rob the father of a former sweetheart of Miss Churchill's. Their next victim is the girl herself, the robbery being carried out when she is motoring with Regis Toomey, who has come back to press his wooing.

After that the plot thickens fast. Mr. Howard snaps out of his cameras situation after situation, piles up his action and by his skill manages to inject a number of thrilling passages. Mr. Toomey happens to enter Mr. Lowe's home at the moment the gem thieves have put their chief in possession of a necklace he himself had presented his fair one. Mr. Lowe is held up by a former pal; and thus are revealed to Mr. Toomey the jewels he had last seen pendant upon the breast of Miss Churchill. Mr. Toomey is later kidnaped, and soon Mr. Lowe is himself the object of plotting on the part of his ex-confederates. The big scene is staged at a night club; Mr. Lowe is shot down despite the heroic Mr. Toomey's battle to save him. This leaves Mr. Toomey alone in the running for the girl's heart.

Miss Churchill shows vast strides in her acting. She puts class into her conception of the society lass, something few of the movie women can do. Possessed of great charm, she also has a voice that registers finely, and ability. The best thing about Mr. Lowe's performance is that he is intensely masculine, always one of his strong points. It may be that as time goes on he will swing back into his wonted histrionic pace; anyway, we may hope so. Mr. Toomey does very well, indeed; and Eddie Gribbon is a splendid crook with a sterling vein of comedy. Our old friend of the stage, Georgia Caine, appears as Miss Huntington; and Earle Foxe is convincing as one of the thief ring.

But the outstanding item in the photoplay is Mr. Howard's direction. Many another director has sculptured a work of much art out of a poor story; Mr. Howard knows his real job and by proper use of his brain and his cameras and his human pawns, has fashioned a film that provides us with a great deal of exciting entertainment.

NORMA'S FILM RISE RAPID

Little things make a big difference in a great career. But for one little thing, Norma Shearer, who is on the screen at Loew's State Theater this week in "Let Us Be Gay," would never have been in motion pictures at all. Norma was born at Montreal, Canada. Intent upon entering motion pictures, she went to New York and registered at every agency she knew of. Few pictures were being made in the East then, and there were many days of disappointment and doubt. Just when things looked darkest, she was called for an interview at an agency. Thirty-five girls were selected before Norma arrived.

Norma Shearer

Entering the room, she noted the eagerness of the other girls and that but one girl remained to be chosen. As the girls lined up, Norma stood on her tiptoes and smiled coyly.

"You'll do," said the casting director, taking Miss Shearer by the hand. The added height the star gave herself by rising on her toes helped her considerably. Her first job in pictures gave her a chance to display her talents, and from then on her progress was rapid.

HELEN KANE ON TWO SCREENS

Aha! Here comes "Dangerous Nan McGrew" to the Fenway and Modern, and it has nothing to do with its namesake, "Dangerous Dan," at all. For the heroine of this rollicking and slightly satiric film opus is none other than Helen Kane, who has been "boop-a-dooping" ever since she made her first stage appearance, and will continue to do so until eternity or the patience of film audiences wears exceedingly thin.

The whole affair is for laughing purposes only, and introduces Miss Kane into the Great Northwest, where men are men, and women in love with the mounted police. Frank Morgan, from the legitimate stage, plays the dark-browed villain of the piece, and James Hall is one of the heroes, while Stuart Erwin, clad for mountaineering with a saxophone in his arms, is another.

The plot, more comic than serious, revolves about a gang of bandits, who obligingly let Miss Kane capture them and pocket the reward. Satire is the keynote of the production, and the quips fall where they may. Not a foot of film is intended to be taken seriously. Why should it? The mere idea of Miss Kane making strange noises in the Great Northwest is comic enough to start on. So "Dangerous Nan McGrew" becomes light summer entertainment and laughter follows in its wake. Shorter films are shown at both theaters.

Added to Cast

John Halliday, Wilbur Mack, Fred Kelsey, and Charlotte Walker are additions to the cast of First National's "Scarlet Pages," based on the play by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer. Other players are Elsie Ferguson, Marion Nixon and Grant Withers.

EMIL JANNINGS COMING BACK TO MAKE TWO FILMS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, July 7—Emil Jannings' American public has never ceased to regret that the talkies sent him back to Europe. He was well established as a favorite when silent pictures became a drug on the market, so Emil, and his pretty wife, Gussie, hied themselves to Paris. But even Paris, Berlin and Rome now demand the talkies, so Emil is planning to return to this country to make two talkies for Warner Brothers.

The initial arrangement was a German-made picture with an English translation to be produced abroad. But that's all changed now. Emil comes to Hollywood to be starred in "The Idol," a play by Martin Brown, now being adapted by J. Grubb Alexander. Naturally there will be a German version and if Emil has really improved in his English as much as people say, well, Warners will probably take up his option and give him more than two talkies to make for them.

OLD FAVORITES do not easily pass out of the memory of the fans. George Lewis, who for some years was Universal's favorite juvenile and who hasn't been seen much since the talkies, has just signed with the Fox company on a three years' contract. Young Lewis is a good-looking chap with a personality and what with a scarcity of leading men he ought to find a niche all his own at the Fox studios. Another bit of Fox news is that William K. Howard will direct "Scotland Yard," Denison Cliff's play. This is the picture in which we announced Edmund Lowe would have the lead.

SOMEBODY IS A GOOD SHOWMAN at First National. The report of tests made for the mother part in "Mother's Cry" continues to increase. There isn't an actress in Hollywood, young, old or middle-aged, who wouldn't forego a week's salary to play that part. It is bound to do for any one that plays it what "Stella Dallas" did for Belle Bennett. So far only two roles have been cast. Beatrice, the daughter, which is one of the outstanding characters will be played by Marian Nixon. Leon Janney has been chosen for the role of Arty as a boy.

HOLLYWOOD, after a hectic Fourth of July and a social week-end, is settling down to business once more. R. K. O., 'tis whispered loudly, is trying to buy the rights to "Beau Ideal" for Herbert Brennon. What could be a better vehicle than another Percival Wren drama. "Beau Geste" is still mentioned among the finest of the silent pictures and if Mr. Brennon can repeat himself, we hope the negotiations will be completed without delay. Another bit of R. K. O. news concerns Betty Compson. Arrangements were almost completed for Betty to play opposite George Bancroft in "Rolling Down to Rio" when R. K. O. suddenly decided there was work for Betty to do at her own studio. She was recalled pronto and Helen Landis was given the part by Paramount.

THE COMEDIANS are getting a break. Folks do love to laugh. Harry Langdon, whose sad eyes have been in the papers every day in connection with a suit being waged against his wife by her former husband, is to play the feature lead in "See America." Ever since Harry took stock of himself and decided he would play straight roles instead of the funny characters he built up, he has been in demand at all the studios. Another comic who has been signed by Universal for the same picture is "Slim" Summerville.

ELISE BARTLETT is all worried that her friends will think that she never had any intention of going to New York. They gave so many farewell parties for her, but there is a reason for her staying in our midst now. She had her bags all packed, her ticket bought, and was ready to depart eastward on The Chief when First National telephoned and invited her to play the part of Irene in "Hot Heiress," the second feminine role to that of Ona Munson. What could Elise do but accept? A job's a job in any country, isn't it?

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: The Allan Dwans' house, a profusion of red and white flowers with the color scheme carried out in the cakes and candles. Marie Dwan in pale lavender pajamas trimmed in eggshell, looking very attractive. Bebe Daniels wearing white sailor trousers and blue coat. May Allison Quirk in beach pajamas of red and white. Ruth Chatterton in yellow, Mrs. David Butler in white and green with wide trousers that formed almost a skirt. Mrs. Tod Browning in red and yellow pajamas and Mrs. Robert Leonard wearing the same color. Allan Dwan, Herbert Brennon and Ralph Forbes playing a hotly contested game of tennis. Lois Wilson a house guest at the Ralph Forbes' over the week-end. Mildred Harris glimpsed on the beach with an attentive escort. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Plymouth Trips Popular

The Plymouth trips of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Co. continue to attract thousands wishing to flee the heat of the city and at the same time see scenes of Pilgrim glory. The steamers sail from Rowe's wharf each day excepting Monday at 10 o'clock a. m. and at 2 p. m. on Saturdays.

DOWLING TOPS KEITH-ALBEE PROGRAM

Who can this be on the stage of the Keith-Albee but our old friend of the musical comedies, Eddie Dowling! And it must be admitted that Mr. Dowling is quite an attraction, for he always gives good entertainment and he never disappoints his audience. No wonder that he is popular. At the Keith-Albee this week he does without special settings and a special company, and gives a notable one man show all his own.

Eddie Dowling

On screen, the film of the week is "The Big Party" with Sue Carol for its real star and Dixie Lee for its avowed one. Miss Carol is so much better an actress than Miss Lee that there is no comparison, and she shows it in this film, despite its story, which is more of a comic strip than a real plot.

See the little shopgirls! One gets a job in a French dressmaking shop of Fifth ave., and the most astounding things happen to her. Will the hero be jealous? You just bet he will. Will the shop be run by two comic partners in the shape of Walter Catlett and Charles Judels? Of course it is. Will everything come out right side up in the end after the heroine has sung a "torch song"? Inevitably! But "The Big Party" is light and harmless eye and ear entertainment for all that.

Screen Idol Has Fine Record in Athletics

Richard Arlen, who is appearing in "The Border Legion" at the Scollay, beginning today, was a champion swimmer and skater at the University of Pennsylvania. When the war broke out, he joined the Royal Flying Corps.

After the Armistice he signed as an instructor at the famous St. Paul Athletic Club. But wanderlust seized Arlen, and he wandered to the oil fields of Texas and Oklahoma, later going to Los Angeles to try out in the movies. His success was instant and since that time he has been seen in many screen attractions.

PORT OF BOSTON NEWS

By CARL MORRISON

Mayor Curley has an opportunity of helping harbor business development, by giving his support to the plan for a wider draw span on the L st. bridge.

The reasons advanced by the petitioners are:

3—Possibility of saving a great part of the expense by the use of solid-fill causeways.

4—Keeping industries requiring wharfage in Boston rather than losing them to Chelsea and other places.

The movement is gaining strength rapidly in South Boston and elsewhere, and a hearing is expected within a week. Figures have been compiled to show that if the draw is widened as desired developments in the vicinity would increase in value within two or three years to the extent that the city probably could collect $200,000 more revenue yearly.

BOSTONIANS AFLOAT

On the Hamburg-American Liner Cleveland, arriving in Boston yesterday from Hamburg, Boulogne and Galway were:

RULES THE SEAS

Tonight in New York a group of 100 New England representatives of the White Star line, and about a dozen Boston newspaper men who "cover" shipping news, will be guests at a brilliant function on the new Britannic. This ship, the largest motorship under the British flag and the largest cabin ship in the world, has just arrived in New York on her maiden trip. She will nose into Boston harbor on July 13, to pick up a big passenger list for the return trip of the maiden voyage. On her trial trip, the Britannic demonstrated many new features. Her powerful engines and other mechanical equipment worked smoothly and without vibration, which is an important point to sea-going tourists.

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

Frank Flaherty

Frank has been with the Shipping Board for eight years, and has a wide harbor acquaintance. He is known as the unofficial harbor entertainer, for his excellent tenor voice and his Broadcasting Syncopators are greatly in demand.

This young man recently made a hit with the Foreign Commerce Club with a program at a banquet. Frank has been in vaudeville for three years, out of the Keith office, and for four years has been a radio artist with WBET, WLOE and WLEX. He has two hobbies, which are singing and boating. He is an East Boston product.

VETERAN TRAVELLERS

We came across an item in our mail today, telling of an 81-year-old Minneapolis man who was a "veteran" traveller with 22 crossings. This was eclipsed by a news despatch from the French line which quoted R. E. L. Cochran, of New York and elsewhere, as having 177 trips to his credit, beginning in 1886.

Largest U. S. Liner to Cost $21,000,000

Chicago, July 7 (AP)—William Allen, western traffic manager for the United States Lines, announced yesterday that contracts had been awarded for the construction of the largest liner ever built in the United States.

One of the sister ships to be built, the vessel under contract, will be 31,000 gross tonnage and will cost $21,000,000, Allen said. The line plans a $90,000,000 building program for the next few years.

"DUTY TO CARGO"

Under the heading of "Ventilation of Compartments," the American-Hawaiian series of articles on "duty to cargo" today has some important facts. The article follows:

Painstaking attention must be given to the ventilation of the cargo compartments. This is a matter as complicated as it is important. Years of study and untold detailed investigation have been given to it. The extremely varied climatic conditions on long voyages and the ten thousand and one different kinds of commodities carried in the thousand and one different types of containers, make the solution of this problem most difficult. Many containers and commodities are, for example, of a hygroscopic nature (i.e., will absorb moisture when air is moist and will emit the moisture so absorbed when the air becomes dry). Thus, forced, natural, or restricted ventilation, according to temperature changes or the varying humidity of the atmosphere, must be applied. There are many facets to the ventilation problem and the modern carrier must comprehend and be equipped to serve them all.

As a matter of fact, the really efficient modern carrier is working unceasingly on this problem. Its operation department has voyage temperature reports for continuous study, set instructions to masters as to when and how to ventilate, and exhaustive atmospheric and sea-water temperature records of all periods of the year based on complete meteorological data and past averages, for constant use and study. And all this bears excellent fruit. For, though, so far as we know, no carrier has yet wholly solved the problem of ship and cargo sweat, which still remains one of the perils of the sea, the efficient and up-to-date carrier has done much to master it, and these efforts are sharply reflected in the record of diminishing damage to cargo from this cause.

Stepdaughters of War

too sorry for it. If it experiences half the embarrassing sensations I experienced its life must be one long torture. Five minutes passed before I dared glance up from my program, and to meet hundreds of staring eyes. Brown eyes, blue eyes, small eyes, large eyes—curious eyes all of them, and all hungry and unspeakably filled with longing. I went scarlet.

Once I dreamed I was traveling in an underground carriage minus a stitch of clothing—I felt exactly now as I did then. Naked and exceedingly ashamed. The prisoners circled round and round the cage whispering and pushing the front ones away when they had stared long enough. It was the first time most of them had ever seen an Englishwoman and Tosh whispered that their remarks were distinctly uncomplimentary.

She made me see the funny side of it. While they admired my red cheeks my bust was too small and my legs inches too thin, and while Tosh's bust and calf measurements met with universal approbation they did not like her wind-tanned face.

Unanimously they decided that Englishwomen were not physically attractive. They were very nice about it, Tosh translated, the remarks were more in sorrow than in anger, all without a smile and quite impersonal, with none of the cheeky, witty Cockney atmosphere our own Tommies would have managed to infuse into a similar situation. Most of them would have condescended to make love to us, however, in lieu of anything more exciting, Tosh translated.

Fortunately neither Chump nor Baynton spoke German, and the officer in charge had no idea Tosh was a fluent linguist. As it was he kept shooting agonized glances in our direction when the whispers became too penetrating.

Tosh and I were almost in hysterics with suppressed laughter at his facial expressions.

"What's that they are saying?" Chump kept asking, and he would say: "Oh, they are wondering what kind of uniform the ladies are wearing," or "They are admiring the big fur gloves Miss Smith has and saying how warm they must be in this weather."

It was killing in view of the actual remarks. Finally, just as the young man had glued himself to the cage near Tosh and was treating her to the most passionate glances—a prisoner called Von Someone opened the piano, an order was ripped out, the men took their seats on the benches and the concert started to my relief. It is something of an ordeal to sit in a cage and be stared at by hundreds of men who haven't seen a woman for months. The iron bars seem less iron-like as the seconds pass. It is not the safest feeling in the world.

The concert was excellent—or we were ready to be amused by anything. The pianist in particular was good, although Chump called the officer in charge a liar when he said he was the Paderewski of Germany. In a minute, Chump said, he'd have the Kaiser on the platform doing a song and dance.

The officer was furious; he was proud of the talents of his prisoners. I wish I could have understood the comic recitation, Heinrich Fliegenbutton, which amused Tosh more than the prisoners, who received it much in the resigned manner that Mother adopts when Father tells his pet stories at dinner-parties—whereby I gathered they had heard it on many weary occasions.

The elocutionist, said the officer in charge, was a former head waiter at the Savoy. "Oh, make him Von Hindenburg," pleaded Chump, but the officer in charge ignored him. Queer, one never speculates on a waiter being an enthusiastic amateur reciter off stage, so to speak, particularly a dignified head waiter in a first-class hotel, but I suppose we all have our little weaknesses.

Baynton kissed me on the way back. It was not a platonic kiss, either. When I ticked him off he said:

"Have a heart, old dear, I'm going up the line tomorrow; I'll probably be dead mutton before I get a chance to kiss another girl."

So I let him kiss me again. I had never looked at it in that light before. "I wish we could stay," he whispered just before we parted. I was just about to ask if he thought the remark worthy of a gentleman when it suddenly struck me as being silly. Silly to accuse a man of being ungentlemanly who is practically sentenced to death. Instead I kissed him of my own free will and wished him a speedy "Blighty." To my astonishment I wasn't in the least shocked by his proposal. How one's outlook changes!

(D. P. U. 3942)

Resolves of 1930, Chapter 56.

Resolve providing for a survey and study by the department of public utilities of the laws of the commonwealth relating to promotion and sale of securities.

RESOLVED, That the department of public utilities make a survey and study of the laws of the commonwealth regulating or otherwise pertaining to the promotion and sale of securities with a view to the revision, codification and simplification of said laws and the making of any other improvements therein that may seem advisable. The department shall hold hearings, may call upon the attorney-general and all other departments, commissions and officers of the commonwealth for such information as may be helpful in the course of its study and survey and may, for the purpose of ascertaining to what extent, if any, the provisions of said laws do not sufficiently regulate the promotion and sale of securities, require, by summons, the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books and papers relating to any matter within the scope of this resolve, and may administer oaths to witnesses testifying before it. The department may expend, with the approval of the governor and council, for the purposes of this resolve such sums, not exceeding, in the aggregate, five thousand dollars, as may hereafter be appropriated. It shall include in its annual report to the general court its findings and recommendations with relation to the subject matter of this resolve, together with drafts of legislation necessary to carry its recommendations into effect.

Pursuant to the provisions of the above resolve, the Department of Public Utilities will hold a public hearing at its hearing room, 166 State House, Boston, on Tuesday, July 15, 1930, at ten-thirty o'clock in the forenoon.

CITY OF BOSTON

OFFICE OF CLERK OF COMMITTEES

Notice of Hearing

July 3, 1930.

The Committee on Ordinances of the Boston City Council will give a public hearing on Wednesday, July 9, 1930, at 1 p. m., at the Council Chamber, City Hall, on the following proposed ordinance:

Section 1. No person owning or having the care, custody or possession of any musical instrument, radio set, phonograph, victrola or other machine or device for producing or reproducing sound shall operate or use or permit to be operated or used such machine or device in such manner as to disturb the peace and comfort of the neighboring inhabitants, or at any time with louder volume than is necessary for convenient hearing for the person or persons who are in the room or chamber in which such machine or device is operated and who are voluntary listeners thereto. The operation of any such machine or device between the hours of eleven o'clock p. m. and seven o'clock a. m. in such manner as to be plainly audible at a distance of fifty feet from the building or structure in which it is located shall be a violation of this ordinance prima facie. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit playing by a band or orchestra in a hall, building or in the open air, but this exception shall not apply to a reproduction of such playing by any machine or device.

By order of the Committee,

This Is the Treaty

Inferiority for a Billion

Against the ratification of the London naval treaty the minority report from the Committee on Foreign Relations makes out an unanswerable case.

, This report submitted by Senator Johnson of California and signed also by Senators Moses of New Hampshire and Robinson of Indiana shows conclusively that, from the American point of view, this is "A BILLION-DOLLAR TREATY FOR THE PURCHASE OF NAVAL INFERIORITY."

In the view of the minority, arrived at after a painstaking study of the treaty and a careful weighing of the evidence adduced at the hearings before the committee, the main objections to the ratification of this treaty are that:

With regard to the protection of American commerce on the high seas, it abandons the American naval policy sustained for more than a century—

It utilizes to our detriment the sacrifice we made in 1922, junking new and unfinished ships, and makes our restraint in naval construction in recent years the excuse for still further sacrifices, unmatched by any other nation.

It eliminates our great superiority in destroyers and submarines without material compensation, just as our great superiority in battleship power was emasculated in 1922 without commensurate return—

IT DESTROYS THE 5-5-3 ratio we so dearly bought at the Washington conference, and by the surrender of that ratio this treaty greatly reduces our ability to protect a rapidly growing trade upon which the business prosperity and livelihood of this country vitally depend—

It does not give us parity with Great Britain in naval vessels and leaves us far below parity in naval power or commerce protection—

It gives Japan and Great Britain a further advantage by leaving to them battle cruisers for which an allowance of much needed 8-inch gun cruisers to the United States only partly compensates—

It denies us the kind and number of cruisers which our needs demand—

It enables us to build only the cruisers that Great Britain "permits" us to build and not those cruisers that we ourselves because of our requirements desire to build—

It hamstrings us in the Pacific "by its unjust and unfair increase in the ratio of Japan"—

It holds us to our bargain not to strengthen our far Pacific bases which was the price we paid for the ratio fixed at Washington, but it permits the other party to that bargain to evade its obligations—

It makes no saving to our taxpayers, but on the contrary if acted upon it would add a billion dollars to our expenditures—

These are some of the reasons given in the minority report why "the treaty may imperil our vast sea-borne commerce and endanger our country's future."

These are some of the grounds upon which Senators Johnson, Moses and Robinson denounce the treaty as "unfair and unjust to the United States" and demand its rejection.

The administration which negotiated this un-American treaty transmitted it to the Senate without giving a single reason why it should be ratified.

A majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations has reported it to the Senate without a single word of argument in favor of its ratification—indeed, as the minority report points out, "without one word of comment, explanation or elucidation."

And now the Senate is to be convened in extra session in mid-summer and threatened with cloture unless it ratifies without the crossing of a "t" or the dotting of an "i" a treaty negotiated in secret, and condemned by our highest naval authorities.

Not only should the Senate reject the London treaty for the reasons given in the Johnson-Moses-Robinson report—

But the Senate should also resent and resist the coercive methods employed to compel its advice and consent to ratification.

To sign this treaty would be a disgrace to the Senate and the administration, and a menace to this nation.

We're Still Inventors

Patent Office Records Maintain Fact

We are prone to look upon the age of inventions as of the remote past.

Our thoughts turn to Franklin, a Bostonian, discovering the science of electricity. We recall Whitney and Howe, both Massachusetts boys who made good in the city, as producing the cotton gin and the sewing machine.

Mind's fancy turns to Bell, a Vermonter, and the telephone; Morse and Farmer, a New Hampshire lad, for the transmission of signals by wire; of the Wrights and the airplane, Holland the submarine, Edison and the incandescent lamp, Westinghouse and the airbrake, and so on, ad infinitum, but all in the golden days of yore.

But we must awaken to immediate accomplishments of American ingenuity when we read that the Patent Office gazeteer of current issue contains 3174 patents, the largest of any single issue in our history as a Nation.

Take at random any ten inventions or discoveries or developments which modern life and conveniences require and you can say truthfully and pridefully, "America did it." Transportation, the electric light, radio, telephone and telegraph, the automobile, the aeroplane, electric refrigeration, the gramophone—how would be getting on without these contributions?

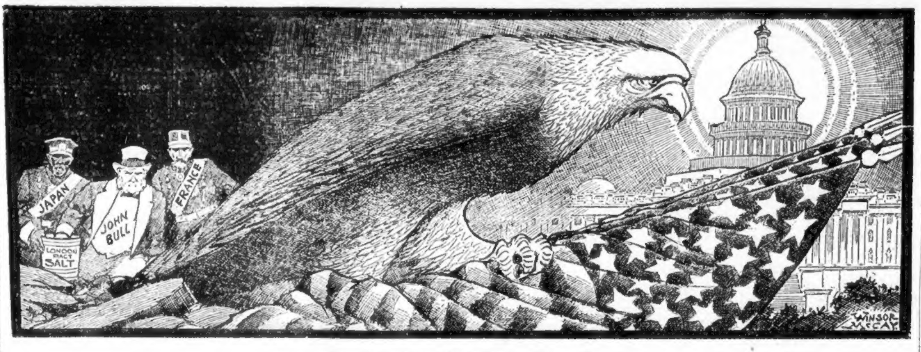
Let's Have an Encore

By all means those who are in charge of the Tercentenary program should give us another production of the remarkable pageant which was staged on the shores of the Frog Pond in Boston Common.

Its fidelity to Boston's 300 years of history was exact. The costuming, lighting and music were a splendid achievement. The tableaux were beautifully staged and the pantomiming gave abundant evidence of a fine histrionic ability. In short, it was highly creditable to the youth and children of Boston who engaged in it and to those who assembled and directed it.

It should be seen by ten times the 100,000 people who were fortunate enough to be its spectators on the afternoon and evening of the Fourth.

THE STALKERS



See Editorial, "This Is the Treaty."

Home-Grown Teachers

Chairman Hurley's Arguments Merit Consideration

Chairman Joseph J. Hurley has set up a number of interesting reasons in defense of the Boston School Committee's decision to limit the employment of future teachers to residents of Boston.

If his letter escaped you, you should get it from the editions of the Boston Evening American in which it was published or from Mr. Hurley.

He estimates that the principals, directors and teachers who have established homes for themselves outside the city limits receive $4,000,000 in salary annually from the Boston Treasury.

That amount is the equivalent of $2 on the tax rate of the city. Additionally, the homes and living quarters which would be occupied by themselves and their families could appreciate the taxable property value of the city by ten millions.

Their residence here, it is seen, would soften the annual blow of taxes which falls heavily upon the neck of the property owner and would contribute to the mercantile income of those who pay the teachers' salaries through taxes.

The public employe who derives his income from the city for participating in its affairs accepts for himself a category quite different from our other citizens. We require our Mayor and our city fathers to establish and maintain legal residence here; the identical principle can be consistently run down the line to all employes.

The contention that the city would be prevented "from getting the best teachers" by this restriction hardly holds water. We pride ourselves on the oldest and best public school system in the Nation. If such a system cannot produce teachers it is unworthy of the pride and attention we lavish upon it.

Any fear that it embarks upon a new restrictive policy which violates democratic practices is without consequence. Our States repeatedly limit their contracts and their positions of gain to their own citizens. Our Nation bars its elective and appointive positions to citizens of foreign allegiance. In fact, it requires that the President shall be native born. And our Boston school graduates who apply for teaching positions elsewhere find that their Boston residence is a frequent cause for their rejection, even in Massachusetts cities and towns.

The whole policy is one of expediency, not one of right. It is within the province of the city of Boston to say to its future teachers:

"If I am good enough to work for, I am good enough to live in. You can come to work with that understanding."

Generous With Talent

A musician is said to get more enjoyment out of his work than the member of any other profession. Probably untrue, as a work well done contains ample satisfaction for the industrious in all trades.

But it does seem that the musicians, in common with the actors, are always making generous gifts of their services. Their decision to supply a band of 400 experts for the Tercentenary program on Boston Common, August 21, is another manifestation of this constant liberality.

So, let's toot the horn for these free-hearted fellows.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

Summer Visitors

THIS IS going to be a poison pen article. It is deliberately written for country hostesses to clip and send to various summer visitors — with the fond hope that it will make 'em madder'n hops.

Elsie Robinson

Mrs. Ben Williams suggested it—but it goes for practically every week-end hangout from Cape Cod to the Golden Gate. Mrs. Ben has a nice little place, just a few miles out. Not very big, but pretty as a doll house, big oaks and elms, scattering lilac shadows over its white walls.

A scarlet rambler, twisting and spraying up the tiled roof, where gray pigeons coo, turning their irridescent necks in the splattering sunlight. A scrap of green lawn, flower bordered, gay as an Italian 'kerchief. And a bit of a pool where goldfish swim and scraps of sky float slowly, like blue lilies.

A treasure, that little country home. It has taken Ben and the missis eight years to pay for it. And all that time they were planning how some day, when everything was ready, they would share it with their friends.

The gorgeous week-ends they'd have. What a sweet rest it would mean for poor, tired Jane and Ed, and Mary and Al. Lazy gossip in the cool living room—lovely evening hours about the pool when the moon bloomed, like a great magnolia, in the purple mystery of the night. How good it would be to have folks around!

That's how Ben and the missis planned. They're still planning, but on the reverse. For now what they want is a sure-fire recipe for keeping folks away.

Didn't their friends enjoy the place? They did, indeed. But how? Going to the country meant going loco to the city folks. Wait to be invited? Not they. They arrived in droves. And five minutes after they arrived the pretty guest room looked like an ill-kept municipal dump.

Clothes scattered all over the place—shoes on the bed—lipstick smears on the lace covers—a scum of powder and dust and soap on everything. But that wasn't a patch on the living room. Books, paper, strewn around—dropped helter skelter. Cigarette burns in the rugs. Busted victrola records.

Cocktail rings on the cherished mahogany. Ben and the missis do not drink themselves, but what's a week end without gin, say the guests, unloading a case full.

And the garden! Roses yanked off regardless of broken bushes. A gouged lawn, a trampled pansy bed. Hammock in shreds. And a fishing party in the pond! As for the kitchen—fill in the blanks yourself. Sunday after Sunday Mrs. Ben stewed over the stove and sink while the Sunday visitors made whoopee elsewhere.

Why did they invite such rowdies? That's the funny part of it. They aren't rowdies, normally. They have charming homes of their own in the city and are mighty choosey about them. No cocktail rings on their mahogany, you may be sure! Indeed they do very little entertaining of any sort.

"We're awfully sorry—we'd love to keep you over the night, but you know how crowded these apartments are!"

So the city folks guard their privacy and possessions. But it never seems to occur to them that country folks also have a right to privacy and possessions. Down they come in swarms, as uninvited as the locusts. But what they do to a well organized home makes any locust look like a piker. Therefore, this letter.

H. G. Wells on 'The Science of Life'

SIMILARLY WITH other unpleasant recessive genes — one, for example, which produces a kind of insanity coupled with blindness, and another which produces a hideous abnormality of the embryo, which has one large eye instead of two normal ones.

H. G. Wells

They may be carried for generations undetected, and then, after an unlucky mating, their effects may come suddenly to full realization.

The fact that the genes in these gene pairs are independent entities, emerging separate and unchanged in the gametes after their co-operation in the zygote, is known as Mendel's First Law.

It is a profoundly important law. In popular language, when one is talking of crosses and hybrids one speaks of "mixed blood," and the phrase admirably expresses the belief which lurks at the backs of many minds.

If we take two kinds of blood and mix together a pint of each we will obviously get a 50-50 mixture. If we mix a pint of this with a pint of one of the original kinds we shall get a 25-75 mixture.

If we mix a pint of this with a pint of the same original blood we shall get a 12½-87½ mixture. And so on. This is parallel to our almost instinctive belief about heredity.

One expects races to mix as liquids mix. One expects red crossed with white to give pink, red with pink to give a darker three-quarters pink, red with this pink to give an even darker seven-eighths pink, and so on.

One expects that no amount of breeding with red will altogether remove the whiteness from the trained strain. But all this is wrong. Slowly the biologist has come to know better.

He thinks not of mixed blood, but of assorted unit-genes—a very different conception, born of the facts that we are here detailing.

Mendel's Second Law, to which we now proceed, is easy enough to understand. It is called the Law of Independent Assortment, and concerns the outcome of complicated crosses when the original parents differed in two or more distinct respects.

We may illustrate by one of Mendel's own instances. Mendel worked with peas. He crossed together two strains; one gave taller plants than the other, and at the same time the seeds of the first were yellow, while the seeds of the second were green.

He found that he was dealing with two separate and independent gene-pairs. "Tall" was dominant to "Dwarf" and "Yellow seed" to "Green seed." Every plant in the first hybrid generation was tall and had yellow seeds.

In the second generation the two pairs sorted themselves out independently of each other.

Cal's a Cub Reporter -:- By Arthur Baer

THE FIRST thing that Cal Coolidge should learn as a newspaper man is how to make out a swindle sheet.

The swindle sheet means the expense account. A good newspaperman is allowed all the money he can spend if he can borrow it somewhere.

A good story is anything that's five cents carfare there and back. Borrow a bicycle and always charge 'em for taxicabs.

Cal, you're allowed five dollars a day for meals and room. But you can always join a basket party going in your direction.

Otherwise, you have your choice of either eating or sleeping. We covered the Democratic convention in Madison Square Garden on frankfurters that those 24 Underwood delegates got too weak to bite.

We did pretty good with the swindle sheet at the monkey trial in Dayton, Tennessee, Cal. That last Cal doesn't mean California.

We soaked 'em 55 cents for coconuts to feed the monkeys. The money really went for ice cream cones. But if you mentioned ice cream cones to a city editor he would hit you so hard on the skull that you would have to buy seven hats to wear on the lumps.

* * *

Cal, when you go to a fire or a parade, never put your police card in your hat. We have found that it affords the city service employes a mark to shoot at. A guy with a police card in his hat is the first lad smacked by the police.

* * *

We can arrange for you to get a good spot story of one of those Red stampedes in Union Square. The best way to be an eye-witness at those things is to use a telescope.

* * *

The hours are very nice. They're the same they use in a clock factory. Once over lightly all around the dial.

* * *

These are just a few of the minor details. When we get through making you a newspaperman you'd be glad to be President again at a smaller salary.

Capital Silhouettes

By GEORGE R. BROWN

COLUMNIST CAL says that "we do not produce enough calories to feed our population." Tell it to the wheat farmers with their surplus crops that they can't market.

* * *

LOOKS AS though we'd have to hold up the final statistics on unemployment until after the next meeting of the Republican national committee.

IT SHOULD always be remembered by those who would substitute "Rule Britannia" for "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," as a rollicking old sea song, that when it comes to ratifying a treaty the United States Senate doesn't have to submit to being sand-bagged by the House of Representatives.

McIntyre Abroad

By O. O. McINTYRE

PARIS, JULY 7—Outside of the Bois—I love the woods!—one of the greatest charms of Paris to me is in its perpetual cyclorama of street scenes. They puff up in a sudden swirl, like a quick breeze in dry leaves, and die away as quickly. Every day there are dozens of jangles.

On the Boulevard Raspail, the Left Bank to you—across the creek to me—this morning a taxi driver with a sweeping blond handle bar mustache suddenly stopped his dilapidated cab with a lurch, stood up on his seat and began to gesticulate and shout at nothing in particular.

The usual group eddied about him. A gendarme strolled up, tugged slowly at his own mustache, and as slowly walked away. The driver finally leaped to the ground, gave his ancient contraption a swift kick, and then calmly drove away. The crowd melted and life went merrily on again.

In rue Lappe, where men wear the long visored cap and pink muffler of the Apache, a little while later a drunken man staggered out of a bistro and, using his coat for a pillow, lay down in the gutter calmly to enjoy a snooze. Some one placed a rose behind his ear and the entire block doubled up in a gale of laughter.

A waiter rushed from a cafe in rue Duphot and hurled several small coins into the street, voicing the French equivalent of "Bah!" He walked rapidly up and down, pressing his hand to his forehead now and then in feigned agony. It was his protest over a patron's insignificant tip.

The French extravagance in their advertising encomiums are a howl A fly killer called "Cobra" is heralded on the bill-boards as "Brilliant Extermine Magnifique." A suit of union underwear in a shop in rue Roche bore a placard "Sensationnel—25 Francs."

Overheard in rue Daunou:

"I stood up under a half dozen of the Side Car cocktails but when I drank one of those 'Meme Choses' it put me under the table."

Last night I saw the famous Mistinguett, the idol of the French revues, who owns the most celebrated pair of legs on the continent. She disports at the Casino de Paris—a washed out blond with a gin-husky voice and reputed to be past 60 years of age. When an actress in France passes 40 she "fudges" on her age and instead of becoming outmoded is venerated. Bernhardt, not by any means a spring chicken, was not as old as she claimed to be, and it was her years even more than her art that endeared her. Mistinguett's "boy friend" is Earl Leslie, a personable young American who as an actor would not last for a single matinee at the Palace. But he is featured in every revue with Mistinguett.

Near Rumpelmayer's today I saw New York's erstwhile Beau Brummell, Berry Wall, with his omnipresent chow dog. It was startling to see him without his huge puff tie which he dramatized in the halcyon days of Ward McAllister. He clings, however, to the choke collar, which is now decorated with an immense light blue polka dot bow. Mr. Wall for the first time is beginning to show the imprint of years, but remains a loyal boulevardier.

Millinery for ladies, which for several years revealed only the tips of their noses, now reveals the entire face to the hair line.

For an hour today from a hotel window I studied a young hotel porter and a hotel maid who at intervals would rush into each other's arms in the court yard furtively to exchange hugs and kisses. That is my idea of "studying abroad."

I'm tricking the taxi drivers. They cannot understand my downtown address but all of them know the Hotel Continental. Wherever I want to go down town I say: "Hotel Continental"—and walk from there.

We had dinner tonight at Le Ver Luisant—The Glow Worm—in the narrow little rue Gombust. It was a swell menage but I couldn't do much eating on account of the suggestion of the name.
